By FRANK DRAKE.

The entire roof of the municipal auditorium is unsafe and steel joists of the type which collapsed in a flat section of the roof last Sunday must be replaced, the official board of inquiry into the cause of the cave-in, reported to Mayor Hartsfield and WPA officials yesterday.

The board asserted the steel bar joists which buckled during the heavy rainfall last Sunday were of defective manufacture and that the weight of the water was not sufficient to cause the collapse of a roof of proper design.

Cost About $25,000.
It was estimated it will cost at least $25,000 additional to replace some 320 steel bar joists of the type which failed that are used throughout the construction of the main auditorium roof, and to repair the collapsed section.

Mayor Hartsfield was advised by the board members and engineers that it will be between 60 and 90 days before the auditorium can be opened for use by the public.

Preparing immediately to make application to the WPA for aid in repairing permanently the cave-in and replacing of the steel bar joists, Mayor Hartsfield and Councilman John A. White also instructed the official board of inquiry to investigate the structural safety of the front part of the auditorium housing the armory and Taft hall.

Robert G. Lose, Robert S. Fiske and Carl F. Nonnenaker, members of the inquiry board, yesterday condemned the steel used in making the bar joists that collapsed but reported they had not completed their inspection of the entire construction of the main auditorium, which has just been renovated and remodeled by the WPA at a cost of approximately $525,000.

Their report follows in full:
"Pursuant to the appointment of the undersigned as a commission to investigate the cause of the collapse of a section of the roof of the municipal auditorium and to make a general investigation of the entire structure of the assembly hall, this committee respectfully submits the following:

Andrew W. Mellon Dies in His 83d Year; Heat Is Too Much for Statesman-Financier

Former Secretary of the Treasury Succumbs to Uremia, Pneumonia.

ANDREW W. MELLON.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the Treasury of the United States under three Presidents; former ambassador to Great Britain and one of the world's most wealthy men, died peacefully tonight in the home of a daughter, Mrs. David Bruce.

Death was due to uremia and bronchial pneumonia. He was in his 83d year. His death took from the American scene one of the last of its statesmen-financiers.

Howard M. Johnson, secretary to Mr. Mellon, said at Pittsburgh funeral services for the financier leader would be held Saturday at Pittsburgh's East Liberty Presbyterian church.

Mellon, spare, quiet, white-haired and reserved, had gone to the home of Mrs. Bruce last month, his health weakened by the excessive June heat of Washington, where he had remained to arrange for his national gallery of art.

Oil and aluminum were at the base of his vast fortune—one of the world's greatest. His actual wealth may remain a mystery, but close friends estimate holdings of the banker and his two sons amount to approximately $500,000,000.

His benefactions had run into millions and the operations of his vast enterprises had reached around the earth.

All his life he had been shy and diffident in manner. He went to death less known than many lesser men. Death came at 7:30 p. m. (Atlanta time).

Appointed by Harding.

He became secretary of treasury first in the administration of Warren G. Harding, and was held over by President Coolidge and Hoover.

Republicans called him "the greatest secretary of the treasury since Alexander Hamilton," but in his public career he was long the target of Democratic party criticism. By some he was made the symbol of great corporate wealth. In 1924 there was an unsuccessful attempt in the senate to drive him from office.

The public never knew the real power and force of his inner-circle advice to the Republican party. He was widely regarded as one of the ablest supporters of Herbert Hoover as President. In 1928 it was Mellon who swung the big Pennsylvania delegation in line for Hoover.

He smashed a powerful "stop-Hoover" movement.

In House for Month.

He had been in physicians' care for three weeks and had not been out of the house for a month. Steadily he had grown weaker.

When he arrived at the Bruce home he walked occasionally about the grounds, but even this activity soon was denied him.

"The end was perfectly peaceful," said Bruce. "He was very weak." He made no last statement or request as he died.

Mellon's body will be taken tomorrow to Pittsburgh by train. Funeral services in Pittsburgh's East Liberty Presbyterian church which the Mellons helped to build were set tentatively for 2:30 p. m., Saturday.

Mellon's last public benefaction—the National Gallery of Art he projected for Washington, D. C.—was a $50,000,000 collection built

W. E. Page, prominent Georgian and southern newspaper publisher, was fatally injured yesterday when his automobile failed to make a sharp curve just north of Camilla and overturned.

Picked up by J. E. Brooks, a Camilla banker, the former internal revenue collector, died on the way to the hospital without regaining consciousness. He was 49 years old.

En Route to Florida.
Page was en route from his home in Columbus to Florida where he had planned to "rest up" from a recent appendectomy. He was having a last night at Sea Island, motoring on to Brunswick this morning to join Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta, and Marion H. Allen, of Milledgeville, who just recently succeeded Page as United States internal revenue collector.

"Georgia has lost a great citizen and a loyal friend. He was productive of immeasurable good to his state," Lucas, an intimate friend of Page, said yesterday. "No one feels his loss more keenly than I do."

Well known in Atlanta, Page had lived here during his service as internal revenue collector. From the time of his appointment by President Roosevelt in 1933, he made his home on Peachtree road. Last year, however, he divided his time between his Atlanta and Columbus homes—finally resigning his federal position on July 15 of this year to assume active command of the R. W. Page newspaper enterprises. He had directed the Roosevelt campaign in Georgia in 1932.

Great Britain Is Preparing For 'Appropriate Action'

U. S. BOARD HALTS BIG RAIL STRIKE

Carriers' Management and Chiefs of Unions Consent to Mediation.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Swift intervention of the National Mediation Board today forestalled a strike of 350,000 members of the "Big Five" railroad brotherhoods. Both the unionists and the carriers agreed to submit a controversy over demands for a 20 per cent wage increase to the federal agency.

Mediation hearings were scheduled to begin here Saturday. The peace overtures were initiated while the brotherhood chiefs were in session with the avowed purpose of fixing the hour and the day for a nation-wide walkout of the men who man the trains.

Board Sets Hearing.
But the conference ended with a joint announcement setting forth:

"The National Mediation Board has taken jurisdiction of the dispute and has advised it will be prepared to begin mediation proceedings in Chicago Saturday morning, August 28. Pending the outcome of the mediation, further action of the organizations (brotherhoods) will be held in abeyance."

Shortly afterward, the carriers' conference committee of 15, reported in Page 5, Column 3.

Severe Reproach Considered But Eden Is Cautious; Full Report Asked.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Leaders of the British government, shocked by the wounding of the British ambassador to China by Japanese bullets, tonight promised "appropriate action with the Japanese government."

The foreign office received regular reports on the condition of Sir Hugh Knatchbull-Hugessen, His Majesty's envoy plenipotentiary, and Anthony Eden, the foreign secretary, considered what the "appropriate action" might be. Sir Hugh was hit by a machine gun bullet fired from an airplane which dived at the automobile in which the ambassador was traveling from Nanking toward Shanghai. The car was flying a Union Jack.

Protest Certain.
Eden is contemplating possible immediate steps in protest, but he may delay action until he is able to establish definitely whether the Japanese planes dived low enough for the pilots to recognize the British flag.

King George VI was given every report on the incident. The foreign office issued a communique stating:

"His Majesty's government received the news of the shooting of His Majesty's ambassador to China with the deepest concern."

"According to their information, the ambassador's car, flying the Union Jack, was fired on with a machine gun and bombed about 2:30 p. m., today, by two Japanese airplanes."

The ambassador was very seriously wounded and now is in a hospital in Shanghai. The British military attaché and the financial

Governments Stirred

Punishment of Chinese.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 27.—(Friday).—(AP)—Reckless aerial bullets that struck down the British ambassador extraordinary to China thrust Japan into grave diplomatic collision today with the empire of Great Britain.

Sir Hugh Montgomery Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British ambassador, lay in a Shanghai hospital, grievously wounded by machine gun bullets from a Japanese warplane.

Almost at the moment he was shot, the Japanese navy indicated it might extend its blockade of 800 miles of Chinese coast south of Shanghai, hitherto confined to Chinese shipping, to include assumption of the right for Japanese officers to board and search the ships of other nations.

Property Bombarded.
Japanese air bombers added to the mounting toll of American property damage in the Shanghai area by a 90-minute bombardment of a million-dollar American-owned dairy farm near this city. Three Americans had narrow escapes.

The British envoy was wounded Thursday while motoring from Nanking to Shanghai on a mission of peace. Two automobiles, each displaying a large Union Jack, carried the party, which included Lieutenant Colonel W. A. Lovat-Fraser, military attaché, and E. L. Hall-Patch, financial adviser to the embassy.

Fifty miles from Shanghai, two Japanese planes swooped down, flying so low that members of the British party could easily see their Japanese emblems.

The first plane sprayed the cars with machine-gun bullets, at least two of which struck the ambassador as he stopped his car and stepped out.

Bomb Also Dropped.
The second plane dropped a bomb, the concussion from which knocked Colonel Lovat-Fraser unconscious. Otherwise he and Hall-Patch were uninjured.

The ambassador was rushed to the New Hospital in the Shanghai International Settlement, where surgeons found one bullet had broken his back but had not harmed the spinal cord. This bullet had entered under the right armpit and come out on the left side near the waist.

Sir Hugh's condition was declared critical. Early today he was reported to have rallied somewhat after a blood transfusion, for

U. S. TO PURCHASE NEW FOREST LANDS

31,002 Acres in Georgia's Chattahoochee Unit To Bring Owners $107,450.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The National Forest Reservation Committee, of which Senator Walter F. George is a member, today approved the purchase of 103 tracts of land, totaling 31,002 acres of land in the Chattahoochee forest unit of Georgia. Of this total, 11,538 acres is in what is known as the old Chattahoochee forest unit, and 19,463 acres in the Armuchee division of Chattahoochee.

The average price the government will pay per acre is $3.46, Senator George said, with 31,002 acres offered at a cost of $107,450.40.

Title Examinations.
All the Georgia acres approved today have been forested and appraised by the forest service of the Department of Agriculture, and now that the reservation commission has approved their purchase, the only thing remaining to be done to consummate purchase by the government is for experts to pass upon titles to the land.

The average price of $3.46 per acre offered is $1.52 below the previous average price, officials of the department declared.

Among the largest owners, with the counties in which they are located and the total price are J. F. Keener, Rabun county, $5,245; Frank Eastman, Rabun, $3,900; and

Alfonso's Son Leaves Bride Of 54 Days

Immediate Divorce Hinted
as Weeping Count Quits Wife's Home.

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 26.—(UP)—The Count of Covadonga's 54-day-old second marriage is near a break-up and his wife, the former Marta Rocafof, of Havana, will begin suit immediately for divorce, it was reported today.

The newspaper El Pais said "serious incidents motivated the decision of the Countess."

The Countess' father, Dr. Blas Rocafof, Havana society dentist, admitted his daughter and the eldest son of former King Alfonso XIII of Spain, were estranged. He declined to discuss the case because of the "possibility of a last-minute understanding."

The 30-year-old Count also refused to comment on the report. He moved yesterday from the Rocafof residence in Vedado suburb, where he and Marta had lived since their marriage July 3, to the Plaza hotel, in downtown Havana. His male nurse, Jack Fleming, also is registered there.

Hotel employees said the Count was affected visibly by the new turn of affairs when he reached the hotel. He was very downcast and was weeping, they said.

The Count and Senorita Rocafof, a dashing brunette, were married less than two months after the young Spanish Prince was divorced from his first wife, the former Edelmira Sampedro, also of this city.

LEWIS TO STEP IN TO CALM UAW ROW

Martin Suffers Setbacks;

Communists in Ranks.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Supporters of President Homer Martin, of the United Automobile Workers, suffered three setbacks after winning a roll call test vote today, while wrangling convention delegates awaited the arrival and peacemaking influence of CIO Chieftain John L. Lewis.

The scheduled arrival of Lewis tomorrow morning to address the convention overshadowed for the moment the factional strife which has ripped the sessions since Monday.

Delegates voted down three constitutional changes proposed by the constitution committee headed by David Dow, of Flint, Mich., and controlled by the Martin-progressive forces.

These were to change the convention from annual to biennial, revise methods of calling special conventions and redistribute allotment of convention delegates to locals.

Pausing amid the struggle over convention business, delegates heard David Dubinsky, of New York, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, CIO affiliate, discuss charges of Communism leveled at times against the CIO. Dubinsky said, "We have Communists in our ranks, but as long as they work in industry they belong in

Penitent Mother Admits Kidnaping Of Baby To Take Place of Dead Tot

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—(AP)—A case, the young mother, said Diane was not only unharmed, but was dressed tastefully in new clothes. She turned the letter over to Captain Patrick O'Connell, of the Town Hall police district. It was dated Tuesday, 8 p. m., several hours after Diane was back in the arms of her mother, and it read in part:

"I am 28 years old, I was married five years ago. Four years after my marriage a little girl was born to me, a darling child, and made me so happy."

"Six months ago I lost my husband through a motor car accident. . . . My mourning and being depressed most of the time had a bad effect on my baby's health. She was breast-fed. She

VOTE INJUNCTION*'Referendum To End Refer-

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 26.—(P) Bishop H. M. DuBose, president of the Tennessee Anti-Saloon League, told an interviewer today the league will not oppose a move to enjoin the holding of a state liquor referendum September 23 because the league considers it "a referendum that will end all future referendums."

"If it (the referendum) were stopped it would be a victory for us and if it is held we will win easily," the Methodist Episcopal church, south, bishop said.

The bishop said dry forces will reach Shelby county with a plurality of from 25,000 to 40,000, adding that he was aware of statements from E. H. Crump, county political leader, that Shelby county is not interested in the referendum.

Earl Wingo, 22, of old Campbell county, has been admitted to practice law in the United States

Wingo's application was signed by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood and witnessed by District Attorney Lawrence S. Camp. He will receive his license to practice in the supreme court and court of appeals of Georgia on September 7.

The Governor, in a sharply worded statement, intimated that failure of the court to issue immediately a mandate reversing an injunction obtained by the tract against law enforcement officials, upon which it already has decided, has "frustrated" efforts to enforce the law.

26 Per Cent Gain Shown by State Clay Industry

Incomes from Georgia's clay products industry is heading back toward pre-depression levels, State Geologist Richard W. Smith reports.

Figures supplied him by the United States Census Bureau placed the 1936 income at $2,863,828, a 26 per cent gain over 1935, Smith said yesterday.

The clay products manufactured in Georgia in 1935 amounted to more than $6,000,000, but declined with the depression to slightly more than $1,000,000 in 1931.

Smith estimated 60 per cent of the business in 1936 came from manufacture of building brick, structural steel and drain tile. He added:

"The state has an abundant supply of clay and shale, and future expansion of the industry need be limited only by available markets."

Since I've found mosquito control, I don't dread summer any more. Last summer, after the pests had driven the family almost wild, I remembered how much better Black Flag was for other insects so I decided to try it on the mosquitoes. From then on we lived in peace.

Sausage, one of the most economical and versatile of our meats, has been a staple food for more than 2,000 years. There are two countries largely responsible for the development of sausage as it is known today; namely, Italy and Germany.

There are two general kinds: Domestic and dry sausage. The domestic type includes fresh pork sausage, wieners and other cooked sausage. Germany contributed to these present-day products. Dry sausage includes all the various salamis and cervelats. Most all the salamis contain garlic, while the cervelats do not.

The so-called dry sausage was developed centuries ago in Italy because of the warm climate. This type of sausage was preserved with an abundance of salt and strong spices, such as pepper and garlic. Treated in this way, the sausage kept for a longer period of time. It all kept well at a relatively high temperature and for this reason acquired the name "summer sausage" because it was cured in the winter and used in the summer. Now with our modern equipment, it is made the year round.

Whether it happens to be women who have to plan on a limited food budget or whether it is for something different, there are hundreds of varieties of sausage items from which to choose.

Sausage, because of the hundreds of varieties on the market, can be bought to suit the most fastidious taste. It can be used not only for the three-meal-a-day routine, but also for children's lunches, picnics, bridge parties, midnight snacks; in fact, any and all times when you're looking for good food easily prepared and economical.

And, speaking of picnics—Labor Day reminds us that summer will soon be over, the children will be back in school and all the gay, summer activities will give way to winter work and winter fun. Let's have one more picnic!

The two following recipes I am sure you will want to include in your lunch:

Salami Potato Salad.
Three cups cooked diced potatoes, 1 cup diced celery, 1-2 cup sweet pickle relish, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 2 cups cubed salami.

Add enough salad dressing to moisten.

Thuringer Sandwiches.
Cut thin slices rye bread into rectangles 1 inch by 2 inches. Spread with creole mustard flavored butter. Cut thin slices of dill pickle and Thuringer into rectangles 1-2 inch by 2 inches. Place one slice of pickle and sausage side by side on the bread.

Following sandwich fillings may assist you in preparing your picnic lunch:

(Each is sufficient for two dozen sandwiches.)

Green Pepper Butter
4 green peppers
4 tablespoons soft butter
4 tablespoons white cream cheese
1-8 teaspoon salt
Cut peppers in halves Discard seeds and pulp. Place peppers in double boiler and let steam for 15 minutes. Cool. Chop and add to rest of the ingredients. Use as filling for white or Graham bread sandwiches.

Cucumber Relish Filling.
(For white bread sandwiches.)
2-3 cup diced cucumbers
1-3 cup diced celery
2 tablespoons chopped pickles

2 tablespoons chopped sweet pickles
1-4 teaspoon minced onions
1-4 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon paprika
4 tablespoons salad dressing
Mix ingredients with fork and spread on buttered slices of white bread. Cover with other buttered slices. Cover shortly after sandwiches are prepared, since this mixture soaks into the bread rapidly.

Anchovy Filling.
1-3 cup anchovy paste
1 teaspoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons cream
Mix ingredients with fork and spread on buttered slices of white bread. Cover with other buttered slices and cut into small sandwich shapes.

Cheese-Nut Filling.

pers
1-2 cup tomatoes

Cash Trio Enjoined From Molesting U. S. Work.

Federal Judge William H. Barrett signed a preliminary injunction yesterday preventing Joel Cash, George Cash and Emory Cash, of Habersham county, from interfering with work on a Re-Settlement Administration project in Stephens, Habersham and Banks counties. The three were charged in the complaint with threatening, attacking, and otherwise interfering with government employees on the project, blocking roads, tearing down signs, and destroying government property. The purpose of the project is to conserve forests, game and wild life.

A temporary restraining order was signed several days ago by Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood, subject to the hearing before Judge Barrett.

Fight Over Taxes.
One of his last fights—in which he was squared away against the Roosevelt administration's treasury, which sought $3,000,000 in assertedly unpaid taxes and penalties—is not ended yet.

The Board of Tax Appeals still is considering the case. Earlier, in 1934, the government put the affair before a Pittsburgh grand jury, which refused to indict.

In April of this year Mellon, 36 other persons and 37 corporations were named in a complaint against an alleged monopoly of the Aluminum Company of America and its affiliates.

His Treasury Policy.
Always sparing of words he never was an orator. Even in summing up the complex operations of the treasury as he headed it he was capable of putting his policies in a paragraph:

"These policies are few in number and may be easily enumerated. One is the keeping of expenditures always within the revenues. Another is the payment of the public debt. A third is the levy of the lowest taxes consistent with the government's needs, and still another is the support of the public credit so that the financial integrity of the government shall be a rock amidst the fluctuations of internal and world finance."

The picture the public remembers of him—that part of the public that recalls at all—is of a mild-looking, frail little man with a thin, delicate cigar in his mouth and a hesitant smile upon his face. He was as far removed as possible from the conventional and popular conception of the man of great wealth and affairs. Ascetic in appearance, he looked more like an artist than a banker; more like a professor than a statesman. When he left Washington, at the end of his treasury duties there, the Mellon anecdotes, the Mellon legends, were fewer than gather usually about any cabinet officer. In his whole life, he never was conspicuous.

He was in a sense the last of the

MELLON WAS OFTEN WITHOUT ANY CASH

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Although Andrew W. Mellon handled millions of his own money and of the nation's, he was known often to be without pocket change.

Riding up in front of his Washington office one day, he had to borrow 60 cents to pay his taxi cab fare.

elder statesmen of finance in this country.

A Family Fortune.
His fortune was essentially a family fortune.

Not until he rose into national political prominence were millions of well informed men aware of the almost legendary extent of his fortune—a fortune never precisely estimated, save that it reached into millions.

With these financial and industrial concerns—most of them in Pittsburgh or headquartered there—he had been intimately connected, either as founder, organizer, partner or important shareholder.

The private banking house of T. Mellon & Sons, the Mellon National Bank, Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh, Union Savings Bank of Pittsburgh, the Mellon oil producing interests, the Gulf Oil Corporation, the Aluminum Company of America, the United Steel Company, Koppers Gas & Coke Co. of Pittsburgh, the Carborundum Company at Niagara Falls, the McClintic-Marshall Construction Company (afterward merged with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation), the Standard Steel Car Company, later merged with the Pullman Corporation.

Won't Affect Markets.
Despite the vast stake in the industry of America—and of the world—he had built up, however, financial observers said his death would have no ill effect upon the markets. For years, they pointed out, he had been retired from active direction of the Mellon properties.

Industrial associates classed him as one of the world's great geniuses in the development and building of widely diverse properties.

Former President Herbert Hoover, at Los Angeles, commented:

"His public service will be told by historians. My greatest impression of him was his innate modesty. His life-long benefactions were studiously withheld from the public. For years he forbade mention of the great gifts he had prepared for the American people."

Handles Post-War Finances.
Mellon's treasury career was notable for its handling of difficult post-war financial problems, including refunding agreements with 13 debtor nations of Europe; tax reductions, a cut of 20 per cent in the American national debt and the fact that under his guidance the United States, of all the countries engaged in the World War, was the first to attain a balanced budget after that conflict.

Mellon stepped into the treasury when the government's financial affairs were in a gloomy state, resulting largely from a depression boom during and immediately after the war. Tax rates were the highest in history and the internal revenue laws, hurriedly drawn to bring in war funds, constantly were objects of litigation.

His tax reduction program, involving a decrease of about 30 per cent in the maximum surtaxes on incomes, was assailed as favoring the rich, and his insistence on settlement of the war debts by foreign nations was criticized at home and abroad, but he saw most of his plans adopted. By 1928 he had cut the public debt a round $8,000,000,000 from a total of about $26,000,000,000.

Attacked in Congress.
Unschooling in practical politics, Mellon was the target for repeated attacks in congress, but he went about his work generally heedless of detractors and seldom took public notice of their charges. The differences arose on subjects ranging from taxation, prohibition enforcement, the soldiers' bonus, war debt settlements and farm relief, to charges that he was a representative of big business and was holding office in violation of a law prohibiting the secretary of the treasury from engaging in trade.

Twice efforts were made to remove him, but his position proved unassailable.

His attitude on prohibition was a realistic one. Although devoting much thought to a reorganization of prohibition enforcement on a more efficient basis, he pointed out in his annual reports the great difficulties of attempting to make "wet" states "dry" against their wishes.

Son of Private Banker.
Of Irish Protestant stock, he was born March 24, 1854, at Pittsburgh, the third of five sons of Judge Thomas and Sarah Jane Negley Mellon. His father was judge in the Allegheny county court and retired from the bench in 1869 to establish the banking house of T. Mellon & Sons.

Andrew Mellon was educated in a private school and in the University of Pittsburgh, class of 1873, leaving college shortly before commencement. The next year he entered his father's banking house and was made a partner a year later.

Mellon had little time for interests outside his office. He was 45 years old before he married and he was 67 when he entered the cabinet. He found relaxation in a little golf, an occasional horseback ride and by walking to and from his work. He took annual trips abroad to indulge his hobby for art.

His marriage was contracted to Nora McMullen at Hartford, England, September 12, 1900. A daughter, Ailsa, who married David K. E. Bruce, and a son, Paul, were born to them. The union ended in divorce in 1910, the children remaining with their father.

Mellon's Early Life.
At 17 years of age the man who later was to develop one of the greatest financial empires of all time was considered a "bad risk" by his own father.

Although surrounded by the wealth and comforts his banker-father provided, the ambitious youth decided he wanted to go into business for himself. His preference was for banking, but in view of his frail physical condition, the father, Judge Thomas Mellon, recommended real estate because that business was less confining.

Andrew found some property from which he believed he could derive profit. The only difficulty was that he did not have the necessary money with which to buy. He went to his father and said:

"I want to borrow $3,000. 'Very well, son,' replied the elder Mellon. And the necessary papers were drawn.

Objects to High Interest.
The youth glanced over the documents and exclaimed: "But you're charging me 16 per cent while 10 per cent is the customary rate fixed by your bank!" "I know that," replied the father, "but you are a bad risk at this stage."

Andrew purchased his property. In the deal with him was his 14-year-old brother, Dick. They traded and sold properties until the panic of 1873, when they closed out their business with a "small profit." The 16 per cent interest was paid.

Even before he went into the real estate business, Andrew had had a hankering for banking and between school terms he rode horseback several miles to his father's bank in downtown Pittsburgh, swept the floors and kept

U. S. WILL PRESENT LARGEST EXHIBIT

Better Farming Suggestions
Will Be on Display at Southeastern Fair.

The Southeastern Fair and Atlanta Centennial, showing this year during the week of October 7, will display approximately $40,000 worth of United States Department of Agriculture exhibits, the largest showing of its kind ever made in the southeast.

The exhibits, to be shown in connection with 4-H Club work, will depict better practices in farming, home economics, farm woodlot control, soil conservation, dairying and milk production and forestry, as well as 4-H Club activities.

Selection of the agricultural subjects for display was made yesterday at a conference of J. W. Hiscox, chief of exhibits of the Department of Agriculture; G. V. Cunningham, state 4-H club director, and Mike Benton, president of the fair.

Exhibits will be sent to Atlanta direct from Washington in furtherance of the government policy of co-operation with larger fairs and expositions of the country.

The material is designed to convey to the public the most profitable methods that should be used in farm economics.

Hiscox will be in charge of the exhibits. Educated in Atlanta, he has been in government service for the last 20 years. He has in recent years been in control of government exhibits throughout this country and foreign countries, including his work as director of federal display at the California-Pacific International Exposition at San Diego in 1935-36.

Things tidy around the money cages. Andrew, with his other brothers, saw little of public schools. The father spoke of the environment in such places of learning in despair because of the many "undisciplined" pupils in attendance and built his own schoolhouse near his home. It was ruled by private instructors, and in order to maintain some of the atmosphere of the public schools the father permitted "a few other" children of the neighborhood to matriculate with his sons.

Quit College To Avoid Speech.
In his later writings the elder Mellon said quite frankly he disliked "strict discipline" and so Andrew and his brothers were permitted considerable leeway in choosing their interests. Two brothers, Thomas and James, once decided they wished to be blacksmiths and the father installed bellows and other equipment, per-

JAPANESE EMBASSY

IN CAPITAL PICKETED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(UP)—Police today dragged two demonstrators away from the Japanese embassy when they broke through the lines as authorities sought to halt picketing sponsored by the American League Against War and Fascism. The demonstration was in protest against Japan's military activities in China. It started when 15 pickets appeared bearing signs denouncing Japan.

GRANTS ARE APPROVED. WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Administrator Ickes today announced approval of two grants for PWA construction of Georgia schools—$14,198 for a school at Blairsville, and $21,060 for a high school and gymnasium at Villa Rica.

Camilla, as Page, according to Leonard McDuffie, negro chauffeur who was driving, caught hold of the wheel to show me how to make the curve, an almost right-angle turn where several accidents have occurred, it was reported. "We had changed a tire at Richmond and had to put on an old slick tire," McDuffie said. "About four miles from Camilla the road got slippery. Mr. Page cautioned me about driving on curves. I'd just started driving him a week ago.

"Finally, he leaned over on one curve to show me how to do it, and then we left the highway. I moved as far to the left as I could, but I guess Mr. Page couldn't get over far enough to steer or maybe he was off balance."

The car then skidded off the road, overturned, and plunged into a pine tree. Brooks picked up the victims and took them to a Camilla hospital. Page was dead on arrival. The chauffeur was not seriously injured, it was reported.

Native of Alabama. Page, who operated the Columbus Ledger and Enquirer, the Bradenton, Fla. Herald, and the Wilmington, N. C. Star News, was born in Lee county, Ala., in 1888, the first son of Rinaldo William Page—who later moved to Columbus and became affiliated with the Columbus Ledger.

He received his education at Columbus schools and Georgia Tech and began work on the Ledger at the age of 18. Taking an active interest in Columbus civic and social affairs, Page was a member of the Rotary Club, Southern Newspaper Publishers' Association, Masons, Loyal Order of Moose, Woodmen of the World, and Elks. He served as president of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce in 1921.

One of the first southern backers of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency, Page managed the Georgia campaign in 1932 when Georgia went overwhelmingly for Roosevelt.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Edna Almond Page, formerly of Porton, Ga.; two sons, W. E. Page Jr., business manager of the Ledger and Enquirer, and Edwin Page, recent Emory University graduate; two sons, Mrs. R. W. Chapman, whose husband is editor of the Bradenton Herald, and Mrs. M. R. Ashworth, whose husband is publisher of the Ledger and Enquirer; two brothers, J. E. Page, retired publisher, and R. B. Page, who directs the Wilmington Star News.

The sons left yesterday for Camilla to arrange funeral services. Mrs. Ashworth is now vacationing at Long Beach, Cal.

ALL WALKS OF LIFE MOURN FOR W. E. PAGE

Newspaper executives, civic leaders, government officials and citizens in all walks of life received with profound sorrow yesterday the news of the death of W. E. Page, widely known Columbus newspaper publisher. Mr. Page was injured fatally in an automobile accident near Camilla. Governor Rivers said the state had lost "one of its finest citizens." The publisher, he said, "distinguished himself in many fields but his service to our great President probably was the most noteworthy." Page managed Roosevelt's pre-convention campaign in Georgia in 1932.

Colleague Grieves. W. T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph and Macon News; James R. Gray, vice president and editor of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution; and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, and others issued statements lamenting Page's death.

"I am shocked and grieved to learn of the death of Mr. Page," said Anderson. "Georgia journalism and public service have lost an able and conscientious man."

Gray said: "I thought the world of Gene Page. He was a great citizen. He was one of the pillars of the Democratic party, an able publisher, and a fine friend."

Major Howell said: "The state of Georgia and the city of Columbus have lost an outstanding citizen, and the newspaper profession an able member. Mr. Page made an outstanding collector of internal revenue. While in Atlanta in this capacity he made friends with everyone with whom he came in contact."

"Georgia has lost a great citizen and loyal friend," said Arthur Lucas, theater executive. "He was productive of immeasurable good to his state. No one feels his loss more keenly than I do."

Marion Allen, of Milledgeville, Page's successor as internal revenue collector, said he was "greatly shocked at the passing of this fine citizen, able publisher and loyal Democrat."

Governor Rivers said Page was "an outstanding citizen of Georgia and one whose loss will be felt keenly by the state and her people."

He added: "Progressive Publisher. "Mr. Page was the publisher of two of Georgia's most progressive newspapers and as such helped to mould a fine progressive thought in the minds of the people of the Chattahoochee valley."

"The distinguished himself in many fields but his service to our great President probably was the most noteworthy. As Mr. Roosevelt's pre-convention campaign manager in 1932, Mr. Page built a strong Roosevelt sentiment in this state which remains until this day."

"As collector of internal revenue for Georgia, Mr. Page rendered a great service to his government and its people and it was with extreme reluctance on the part of government officials that they permitted him to retire to private life just a few weeks ago."

"In Mr. Page's death I feel like I have lost a true friend, but beyond that the state has lost one of her finest citizens. I join with the people of Columbus and all others who knew him in mourning his sudden and tragic death."

W. E. PAGE ATTAINS RECORD IN OFFICE

Late Revenue Collector, Publisher Raised Atlanta District to Peak Rank.

The first year after William Eugene Page became the first Internal Revenue collector appointed by President Roosevelt, the Georgia collections increased 500 per cent, highest in the nation. That was in 1933.

He had been devoting all his energies to newspaper management, for which he resigned the collector's post, less than two months when an automobile accident in southwest Georgia ended his life yesterday.

Campaign Manager. He successfully managed President Roosevelt's campaign in Georgia in 1932. At the time he assumed office as collector his staff consisted of 39 workers. When he left July 16 it had expanded to 140 and collections had risen from about $5,000,000 annually to approximately $4,000,000 a month.

During his administration many government taxes were added to those collected by his office, such as social security, beer, wine and liquor and processing taxes. During his 1935 administration, the Atlanta district rose from Grade 13 to 14, the highest rank in the nation, which it still retains.

He said upon leaving office it had "been a pleasure" to serve, and lauded his successor, Marion H. Allen, as a man highly capable for the post.

High Compliment. In asking him to serve as his personal representative in Georgia during his first campaign, President Roosevelt wrote Mr. Page: "I would like to refer my friends to you in whose judgment I have every confidence if you are willing to accept the responsibility."

In July of 1933 the home folks honored Mr. Page at Columbus with a fish fry at the big Eddy Club at Columbus.

Jubilance Diminishes. Montague's jubilation at being admitted to bail diminished as he prepared to visit his ill mother. He has seen her only once since he became a fugitive.

"I am going to see my mother just as soon as I get out of here," he said quietly.

A representative of the National Surety Company, a bonding company, presented a bail bond immediately after Brewster announced the decision. Signing of papers required less than 10 minutes, and Montague hastened from the courtroom.

A PECULIAR ANOMALY

Supporters of the Black-Connerly wages and hours proposal and other plans for uniform regulation of industry all over the country, display a strange inconsistency in their failure to take steps to remedy the palpable injustice to southern industry in the unreasonable discriminatory railroad freight rates on products shipped from the south.

The late Representative Connerly, co-author with Senator Black, of Alabama, of the bill to regiment all private industry under the autocratic control of a five-man, appointive board, publicly admitted that one of the purposes of his bill was to take away from southern industry the advantage of slightly lower wage scales it now enjoys over similar industry in New England.

This advantage, however, is offset by the arbitrary rates on rail shipments from the south, which exact a penalty on every carload of southern manufactured goods shipped to the world markets in competition with similar goods manufactured in the north or east.

A typical example of this unfair handicap is that of textile goods manufactured in Georgia. Such products shipped to the Chicago market from Macon, pay rates averaging $25 per carload higher than the same goods shipped from New England points to the same market. This despite the fact that the haul from Macon to Chicago is the shorter.

The same situation exists for practically every southern product.

It is only because the natural advantages of this section make living costs less than they are in New England, thus permitting the manufacturer to pay a lower wage scale without injustice to the workers, that southern industry has been able to meet the high freight handicap.

That living costs in the south are lower than in the east is shown in a recent survey conducted by the National Industrial Conference Board, one of the most reliable organizations of its kind in existence.

This survey, based upon the living costs of the average family of four in an industrial community, shows that the average cost of home heating is 70 per cent lower in the south; rents average 25 per cent lower in the south; food costs are lower in the south and clothing is 2 per cent lower in the south.

Thus nature gives to southern industry an advantage that permits it to compete on approximately equal footing with that of the east, despite the handicap of higher freight rates.

That there is no sound economic reason for the higher freight rates is evidenced in the fact that the railroad's cost per ton-mile haul, after including every item of operating, investment and overhead expenses, is slightly lower in the south than it is in the east. When all costs are thus included the excuse of traffic density, which is most frequently advanced as the reason for the discriminatory rates, is palpably insupportable.

Traffic density has no effect on total costs, when investment, overhead and operating expenses are included in cost statistics.

Industry in the south will be willing to pay its workers the same dollars and cents for the same hours of work that industry in New England pays, after it is relieved of higher freights and other unjust artificial handicaps.

Then the southern worker will really begin to enjoy all the blessings of life in a region made more advantageous by bountiful nature. Southern leaders and representatives who have the interests of the south sincerely at heart, whether or not they favor enactment of the Black-Connerly bill, will do everything within their power to secure correction of the freight rate situation. The situation provides, at least, an excellent "trading" point and every true friend of the south will strive to remove one inequity before the road is opened to further handicaps on southern industry.

An overlooked advantage of trailer life is that the plumber can take the home back to the shop for his tools.

A bird imitator, readying an act for the amateur hours, has added the dove of peace to the repertoire. He gasps once into a mike.

The Dionnes quarrel, pull hair and bean one another with spoons, as the girls are big enough now to resent people with cures for colds.

A slip of a girl won an annual log-rolling contest on a Michigan river. The weaker sex, too, was represented.

Then there was the American who completed one of those round-the-world cruises without being pulled out of the line of fire by a destroyer.

Not only is China's great wall worthless from a military standpoint, but its vast bulwarking possibilities have scarcely been scratched.

THIS REQUIRES EXPLANATION

Out of all the investigations and disclosures which have followed collapse of part of the roof over the old, front section of the city auditorium, there is one fact that stands out with startling emphasis.

That is the revelation that three competent city officials formally declared the building unsafe three years ago, yet nothing was done about it. It is stated the city building inspector, the city electrician and the chief of the fire department reported to council that the front part of the building, including Taft Hall and the armory and drill rooms of the national guard, was a potential fire trap and also in constant danger of collapse.

Yet the national guard has continued to use the building for its regular assemblies and drills and its equipment, tents, rifles, uniforms and other army supplies have continued to be stored there.

The national guard personnel includes some of the finest young men of the city. They have, it is apparent, been exposed for three years to unnecessary peril and the city as a whole will demand to know why this was permitted.

No explanation has yet been made as to why the three-year-old report on the dangerous state of the building has been so long ignored. There was, apparently no deliberate attempt at suppression. It was given due publicity.

Even though the council found it impossible, at the time, to finance the needed restoration or rebuilding of the structure, steps should have been taken promptly to forbid the national guard or any other group to use the place while it remained in unsafe condition.

Whatever the cause for lack of action on the report of three years ago, the public generally is entitled to a full explanation and satisfactory guarantee that a similar condition will not be possible in the future.

A GEORGIA EXPERIMENT

All Georgia will do well to watch closely the progress of the campaign against syphilis which is to begin on September 1 in Glynn, Camden and McIntosh counties. Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Health, in announcing the campaign reports that it will last for several years, long enough to demonstrate whether it is possible to stamp out this plague entirely.

The three counties which will serve as laboratories for this test are not infected with the disease in any greater degree than many others in the state. It is a tribute to their progressive spirit that they have arranged for the campaign, and other units would do well to follow their example.

Since syphilis first appeared in Europe, about the time of Columbus' first voyage to the New World, it has constituted one of the major ravages of mankind. Competent observers declare that at least one-tenth of the population of the United States is today infected in some degree.

Syphilis may be acquired in scores of ways and the ancient idea that infection is prima facie proof of violation of sex morality has long been relegated to the limbo of false beliefs. The innocent suffer no less than the guilty and its victims are numbered among the most imaculate in personal habit as well as the degenerate.

It is believed, by penologists, that much of the crime problem in the United States is primarily due to syphilis. Its effects on many of its victims include destruction of the moral sense and the formation of an antisocial complex. Many inmates of institutions for the mentally diseased are there as the result of syphilitic infection, and a high proportion of untimely deaths, frequently attributed in the death certificate to heart failure, are really caused by hardening of the heart from infection of the syphilitic germ.

Its disastrous results have many forms and if it can be stamped out, as the black plague, smallpox and other diseases of former days have been conquered, the result in human happiness, prolonged life and greater usefulness will be beyond computation.

Georgia will watch, with vital concern, the effort to wipe out the scourge in those three southeastern counties, with the hope that, if effective there, the same methods may be applied with like result in every county in the state.

DEFINING DEMOCRACY

(From the Cente Coosa River News.)
We are fully agreed with a correspondent in The Atlanta Constitution, Mr. W. L. Ballard, of Syracuse, Ind., who says that "Democracy must be a fine thing, since all claim it." Even dictators say "they are it." And here, cries go up to "redefine" democracy.

Its true definition must also define all other possibilities of life, the whole social field, and not just democracy—to show democracy's "place in nature."

Only three kinds of civilization, social philosophies, philosophies of life, have ever existed or are possible, namely: theocracy, monarchy and democracy. They necessarily came into existence in that chronological order. Fascism, socialism, etc., are merely forms, or combinations, of these three. How could there be more than three "kinds"? (1) Not self-governing, (2) partially self-governing, and (3) fully self-governing. That covers the whole ground.

But we must also know what constitutes a civilization—the innate divisions that compose it—without omission or duplication, and it turns out that there are only five such divisions, or orthodoxies, here named in the order of their importance and dignity. Philosophy, religion, education, economics and government. By them, for instance, we know that, after all, our revolution in 1776, epochal as it was, democratized only "government." The other four, more significant orthodoxies, remain unchanged. That is why our democratic shoe pinches—we are a divided house. To democratize the other four orthodoxies is the measure of man's future social adventure problem.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The President's Political Philosophy—II.

This question of what constitutes democracy—what form of government, what political procedures, and what social goal—is the question of the times in which we live. For it must have become apparent to all that all modern governments call themselves democracies, although they share no common system of ideas. Russia calls itself an "economic democracy" and the only true people's government, and Mr. Browder calls American Stalinist-Communism "Twentieth Century Democracy." Mr. Hitler informed the people of the United States in a broadcast early in his administration, that "Germany is the truest democracy in the world today, for nowhere is a greater percentage of the people behind their chosen leader." Mussolini assails "liberal democracy," but claims that the democratic principle of mass support is inherent in the Fascist system. And now, President Roosevelt, in the Roanoke Island speech, defines democracy as majority rule, pure and simple.

In that speech and that statement, the President breaks it seems to me, with the American tradition and the American ideology, which are based on eighteenth century liberalism. He moves a step closer to the conception that democracy is rule by the masses. The implication is tremendous. For it is a simple fact that in the highly complicated modern world no political technique has yet been found, whereby the masses—or, to use the President's own words, "the majority"—can rule directly. The modern conception of rule by the masses is not the conception of self-government by the people. In practice, it amounts to ratification or rejection by the masses of programs conceived and put into operation from above. A ruler, or leader, presumes to know what the main objectives of the masses are. His election is taken to be a popular mandate to express those objectives in legislation. He asks for full authority for this purpose. And then, from time to time, he submits himself and his program to a popular plebiscite. If a majority ratifies it, he claims that the democratic principle is sustained.

In another article we shall consider in what direction this interpretation of democracy inevitably must lead, and we shall consider how far in that direction this country already has moved. But today we are interested only in showing that this conception of democracy is not in the American tradition, and that it represents a radical, even a revolutionary break with the tradition. For the American tradition conceives of democracy not as something which functions periodically, in the form of ratifying or rejecting plebiscites, but as something which functions continually; which derives authority, not from the majority, but from the whole people; which has its springs in a public opinion which shifts constantly, and has constant expression through free speech, a free press, and free assembly; which provides careful protection to minorities, and checks on majorities, in society, in the constitution, and in the government itself; and which avows that every individual is invested with certain natural rights, which not even a majority of 99 per cent can divest him of.

From the founding of the republic until the twentieth century and until the present time, this thesis has been accepted by all American statesmen, including those of the left and those of the right. In his Roanoke Island speech, the President broke the strongest inference—claimed Thomas Jefferson as the advocate of unchecked majority rule. But these words are Jefferson's:

"The will of the majority is in all cases to prevail, but that will, to be rightful, must be reasonable; the minority possess equal rights, which equal laws must protect, and no state or individual can violate those rights without oppression."

And Jefferson plainly saw that unchecked majority rule, and the concentration of power in the hands of the executive with or without the support of the majority, would amount to despotism. He said so:

"All the powers of government—legislative, executive and judiciary—result in the legislative body. The concentrating of these in the same hands is precisely the definition of despotic government. It will be no alleviation that these powers will be exercised by a plurality of hands, and not by a single one. One hundred and seventy-three despots would surely be as oppressive as one. Let those who doubt it turn their eyes on the Republic of Venice. . . . An elective despotism was not the government we fought for, but one that should not be. The concentration of these powers is precisely the definition of despotic government. It will be no alleviation that these powers will be exercised by a plurality of hands, and not by a single one. The Pulse of the Public

The columns of The Constitution are always open to the expressions of the public, regardless of the opinion expressed. The only limitation on communications is that they shall be signed, be brief—preferably not longer than two or three hundred words—and not libelous. All communications will be subject to editing, and none will be returned unless postage is indicated.

CHANGES NEEDED IN TOBACCO SALES

Editor Constitution: I read your editorial on the marketing of tobacco in this state with a great deal of interest—so much so that I have talked with several warehousemen and they all assured me that the remedy for getting a longer season for tobacco sales is a matter of tying and grading our tobacco.

All states except Georgia and Florida have a law compelling the warehousemen not to accept for sale any tobacco that is not tied in bundles. If we could get our legislature to pass a similar law, the companies will give Georgia a two-month market and many of the evils of rushing tobacco to market would be avoided.

However, the warehousemen claim it would not be fair to keep the present charges for sale of tobacco and have suggested the charges be amended to read as now but with a 75-cent-per-hundred minimum charge for handling the tobacco. If this law can be enacted at the next term of the legislature, it will mean a saving of thousands of dollars to the farmers, which is now going to the large tobacco companies.

AN EDITORIAL AND A SERMON

Editor Constitution: I commend you on the editorial headed "Sad, But Not Hopeless." To my mind, this is one of the finest editorials on a subject in this field that I have ever read and shows a keen appreciation of the Christian gospel, and is itself a splendid sermon.

and I want to personally thank you for it as I know every devout soul who reads it will do.

SUGGESTS METHOD TO STAMP OUT "BUG"

Editor Constitution: Simply because we cannot arrest and convict the heads of the "bug" racket is no reason why we should not try to use some other method that would have the necessary effect.

Why wouldn't it be better for us to show the public that the "bug" is a great gamble and in order to eradicate it, to fight fire with fire?

Let the city operate the "bug" and let the profits go to the Associated Charities. We can then demonstrate to the public what a gamble they are taking and in this way we can eradicate the bootleggers in this field, and at least direct our energies to an educational campaign in which the Associated Charities get the benefit, and a great number of unemployed could be put to work.

It would not take long to demonstrate out in the open that it is only the suckers who want to be fooled with this "bug."

It certainly would be worth trying as an experiment.

Successful G-Man, 13, Bares Weakness for Ice Cream

Constitution Staff Photo—Slayton.

Even a 13-year-old G-man will have his weakness and Taylor Sexton is no exception. It's ice cream sodas and he is shown here with Yoland Gwin, Constitution reporter, as he sipped one with a double scoop of chocolate ice cream while he recounted his adventure when capturing a negro fugitive from a Georgia chain gang Wednesday morning. Young Taylor is the son of Police Detective H. L. Sexton and Mrs. Sexton and his remembrance of photos of fugitives which his father has on file aided in his recognition of the negro.

Youthful Nemesis of Gang Escape Prefers Law to Police Career

Son of Detective, Student of Rogue's Gallery, Leads Dad to Hiding Place of Fugitive Negro and Brings Up Rear on Raid.

By YOLANDE GWIN.
Becoming a sleuth holds no thrills for 13-year-old Taylor Sexton, who said yesterday:

"I'd rather be a lawyer and get them out instead of taking them in."

Taylor, son of Police Detective H. L. Sexton and Mrs. Sexton, found a fugitive from a Georgia chain gang Wednesday morning, and reporting his find to his father who accompanied him to 199 Clay street.

"He's in There." Detective Sexton, acting on his son's statement that "he's in there," slowly entered the front room with Taylor forming the rear guard. Armed with his revolver, Detective Sexton found Charlie Silverman, 22-year-old negro, who admitted he escaped several weeks ago from the Elbert county chain gang where he was serving 13 years for burglary.

One of Taylor's favorite indoor sports next to reading is pouring over the gallery of fugitive pictures assembled by his father. This knowledge plus his detective instinct led young Taylor on Silverman's trail.

But even the thrill of catching the escapee left Taylor cold to a police career or becoming a G-man.

"Gosh, no," he said. "I'd rather be a lawyer. My dad has taken me down to the police station a lot of times when the prisoners are brought to trial. I listened to all they had to say and when it was all over I liked the lawyer's part better than any. I think I'd like to be a detective like dad for a little while then when I am a lawyer I'll know all about both sides."

Caught One Before.

"Catching that prisoner was swell but I caught one once before but I forgot to tell the police who I was. Of course, dad knew about it. I was coming home from school and saw two negro women in a fight. One of them stabbed the other one and killed her. I watched where she went when she left the dead one and keeping as far behind her as I could I saw she went into a vacant house. That's when I called the police."

"My dad has taken me on a lot of trips to catch criminals," said Taylor. "I like to go along and watch how he gets his man. I like G-man pictures and I sure would like to meet J. Edgar Hoover. Dad has promised me that if we ever get up to Washington he will take me to the Department of Justice. I read all the detective stories I can get my hands on. I'll keep on doing that until I get through school. I'm in the high eighth at the Murphy Junior High and dad has promised to send me to law school later on."

Liked in Neighborhood. The neighborhood "gang" think Taylor is a swell fellow. He goes swimming, fishing and hunting with them. He is "in" on anything the gang wants to do and is a general favorite in and near his home at 267 Arizona avenue.

Even at his early age of 13 with all the makings of a G-man and a lawyer, Taylor has one weakness—ice cream sodas.

"How about one now?" he asked.

"Swell, chocolate with chocolate ice cream. What kind do you want?"

"Make it two," we said and at the same time wondering just how many sodas Taylor will buy with the $25 reward which the state pays for the capture of escaped convicts.

SERVICE COMMISSION EXPENSE SHEET FILED

The Georgia Public Service Commission spent $52,674.47 for operation during the first six months of this year, State Auditor Tom Wisdom reported yesterday. Of the sum spent, $26,990.81 was charged to motor carrier regulation, and $25,723.66 to public utility regulation.

Income of the commission from licensing motor carriers at $25 per vehicle was $85,875. Income for utility regulation is derived from a special assessment prorated between companies so as to produce $70,000 annually.

Guernica.

PARIS—The August issue of the London Mercury contains an article by Mr. George Steer which should settle any doubt that may remain regarding the responsibility for the annihilation of Guernica. "Mr. Steer was not strictly an eyewitness of that appalling scene, but he arrived soon after the last bomber had departed and heard the story of such of the survivors as could find words to speak. No more horrible story has blackened history. On to that ancient, peaceful town, at market-time in the middle of an April afternoon, was let loose the unsparing onslaught of modern aerial warfare. First, the light bombers dropping fifty-pounders and machine-gunning the town at random. Then "heavy drumming of engines was heard to the east" and the heavy bombers appeared, dispersing their load a ton at a time. "Besides many 50 and 100-pound bombs, they dropped great torpedoes weighing a thousand," most of them tearing buildings to pieces from top to bottom and penetrating shelters. "As the terrified population streamed out of the town the army fighters dived low to drill them with their guns." This done, the destruction of the town began in earnest. It was about 3:15. For two hours and a half flights of between three and 12 airplanes bombed Guernica without mercy and with system. They chose their sectors in orderly fashion. After the explosive bombs came the incendiary bombs, tubes of two pounds, long as your forearm, gliding silver from their aluminum and electron casings... these fell many at a time, for they were dropped 24 together on a spinning rod. Before long the whole town was ablaze. "A Meccano framework, at every window piercing eyes of fire... Guernica was finished."

Alarm in Australia.

One sparrow is causing alarm among the population of western Australia, who have organized a great state-wide sparrow hunt, with a reward for the capture, dead or alive, of the bird. The sparrow in Australia is an imported pest. From the origin two or three birds millions now exist, for the sparrow has thrived and multiplied in the eastern and even in the central areas of Australia. But western Australia has kept itself free of the sparrow.

The great Australian desert, stretching across the heart of the continent, has been the chief barrier against the sparrow, which is classed as prohibited vermin in western Australia. A fine of 100 pounds is imposed on anyone harboring a sparrow. All the transcontinental trains are closely watched, but one sparrow "stowed away" on a freighter traveling along the coast and escaped when the vessel reached Fremantle. Wide publicity was given to the unwelcome visitor and committees were formed to hunt for it. So far no announcement of its capture has yet been made.

Extent of her injuries was undetermined last night, but hospital attaches said that she was cut about the face and head, and her left hip was probably fractured. She was hit by an automobile driven by Horace Barksdale, 31, of Pinewood road, on Washington street near Clarke street, police said. No charges were preferred as an investigation continued.

mitting them to follow their inclinations until they tired.

The treasury recorded a surplus each year after Mellon took charge. In 1921 the excess of revenue over expenditure was $86,724,000 and this mounted to a peak of $385,809,000 in 1927. Applied, with sinking fund accumulations, to the public debt, these surpluses eventuated into tax reductions ranging from $663,000,000 in 1921 down to $222,000,000 in 1928.

Re-arranges European Debts.

As head of the War Debts Commission, Mellon negotiated funding agreements with France, Great Britain, Italy, Belgium, Finland, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Estonia, Greece, Hungary and Latvia. He negotiated too agreements with Germany, Austria and Hungary for settlement of government and individual war claims through mixed tribunals and arranged for the return of private property valued at $250,000,000 seized by the alien property custodian in World War days.

In 1925 the government, guided by Mellon, adopted a firm attitude toward foreign debtors who had not settled their obligations to the United States. Washington let it be known that honest efforts towards payments would be required for further borrowing in this country.

Ambassador Mellon.

Mellon sailed for what was described as a vacation trip in Europe on June 10, 1931, but while abroad played an active part in the negotiations which followed President Hoover's proposal for a year's moratorium on war debts and reparations. In England, he called on Ramsay MacDonald, prime minister, and also met Arthur Henderson, foreign minister, and Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

His cabled reports to President Hoover were believed to have had an important bearing on the latter's decision to offer his moratorium proposals.

PITTSBURGH SHOCKED BY NATIVE'S DEATH

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The Death of Andrew W. Mellon in Southampton came as a shock tonight to his host of friends and associates in this city, which remembered him as its greatest booster and most loyal native.

The immediate members of the family were in Southampton, N. Y., where the 82-year-old industrialist's progress had been reported in a poor but not critical condition.

Howard M. Johnson, Mellon's personal financial secretary for the past 23 years, could barely speak when informed by the Associated Press of the death.

"That's terrible," he said. "There is nothing to be said."

Pittsburgh will remember Mellon as the most loyal of a host of 19th century industrialists, who made millions here and moved to bigger fields.

He Alone Remained.

Mellon alone remained in the city, while Andrew Carnegie and most of the 59 millionaires he was credited with guiding to wealth, Henry Clay Frick, the coke king; Charles Schwab and others moved to New York.

Mellon was born in downtown Pittsburgh on March 24, 1855, and made this his home while he was devoting more than 12 years to public service.

Mellon personally was responsible for making this headquarters of three giant concerns, Gulf Oil, the Aluminum Company of America and the Koppers Company. He also helped to keep numerous other ones in this city.

In fact, there is hardly a skyscraper or big business in the "steel city" which has not at some time or another felt the directing hand of Mellon or the $750,000,000 banking empire which he moulded.

Monuments of Steel.

Two of the city's most imposing skyscrapers, the Gulf and Koppers building, each costing $6,000,000, are regarded as monuments to the financier.

Mellon's early assistance in 1889 to the discoverers of a new process of extracting aluminum from bauxite resulted in placing the headquarters and main plant of the $300,000,000 Aluminum Company in Pittsburgh and suburban New Kensington.

Mellon and his brother, R. B. Mellon—"My brother and I" he always said in referring to their lifelong partnership—purchased control of the bankrupt J. M. Guffey Petroleum Company in 1907. With their guidance it grew into a $600,000,000 organization in which the A. W. Mellon family has probably its largest holdings.

School Will Open at O'Keefe High for Educators Next Monday.

Approximately 35 Atlanta high school teachers have enrolled in the American Automobile Association's Driver Training school to be held next week at O'Keefe Junior High school, H. Reid Hunter, assistant school superintendent, announced yesterday.

Under direction of Professor Amos E. Neyhart, in charge of the AAA driver training program, classes will begin at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon and will be held daily for the remainder of the week from 8 to 12 o'clock each morning, from 1 to 5 o'clock each afternoon and from 7 to 9 o'clock every night.

Though the present course is for teachers in the white high schools, Hunter said he is trying to arrange courses for negro teachers. Either Professor Neyhart or a graduate of the intensive driver training course will instruct negro teachers, he said.

Hunter pointed out that Neyhart could schedule only one week in Atlanta and that it is possible to give close instruction to only about 35 students during a single course. The program is sponsored here by the Atlanta Motor Club and the high schools.

Burglar Baffles
Atlanta Police

Police yesterday were searching for Atlanta's Jimmy Valentine, the burglar and safe cracker who is looting house and business offices, leaving no trace of his mode of entrance.

Four individual cases have been reported in the last two days, involving loss of $2,986 worth of property, and in no case could owners or detectives find evidence of forcible entrance.

Victims and amounts each lost are: Walter C. Hill, of 505 Argonne avenue, N. E., $2,675 worth of jewelry; Byers Ice Cream Company, 873 Gordon street, $40 from safe; Atlanta Sheet Metal Company, 799 Marietta street, N. W., $90.00 in cash, and $125.79 in checks, and Mrs. J. S. Ward, 3684 Wieuka road, a $55 watch.

In a less mysterious looting yesterday, Mrs. Georgina Manoe, of 617 Cresthill avenue, N. E., reported the theft of $1,700 worth of jewelry from the residence. Witnesses saw the burglar run out the back door.

NEW FUNDS ASKED ON SEWAGE UNIT

Operation of Three Planned Will Require $15,000.

Request for an additional $15,000 to operate three sewage disposal plants the balance of the year, was made yesterday by William A. Hansell, assistant chief of construction in charge of sewerage.

Hansell told Mayor Hartfield two of the new plants built as a part of the $6,000,000 metropolitan sewer system are undergoing tests and another will be tested soon. Extra men must be provided for their operation. Funds will be asked of the finance committee at its next meeting.

Plants already being tested are the South River and Utoy while the Intrustment Creek project will be completed sometime in October.

VINSON WILL VISIT HAWAII TO STUDY ITS NAVAL DEFENSES

Georgian Sails September 30; 25 Congressmen Pay Official Visit.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS. WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Representative Carl Vinson, dean of the Georgia delegation in congress, will sail from San Francisco September 30 on the steamship Malalo for Honolulu with a congressional party of 25 for an official study of Hawaii's desire for statehood.

Vinson Studies Defense. While the congressional party will study other subjects relating to the welfare of the territory, Representative Vinson, who is chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, will interest himself particularly in the naval defenses of Hawaii, especially Pearl Harbor, the largest defense base on the islands.

The trip is being made in accordance with a concurrent resolution passed by both houses of congress during the closing days of the last session through which a joint committee on Hawaii was created. The members were appointed by Vice President Garner and Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead. Many members of the joint committee will bring their wives and others of their families.

Committee Members.

The committee will include, besides Representative Vinson, Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, chairman of the senate committee on insular affairs; Representative Lex Green, of Florida, chairman of the house territories committee; Senator and Mrs. William H. King, of Utah; Senator Tom Connally, of Texas; Senator and Mrs. Homer T. Bone, of Washington state; Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont; Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Senator and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, of California; Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska; Minority Leader of the House Bertrand Snell, Representative and Mrs. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi; Senator and Mrs. Prentiss Brown, of Michigan; Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, of Minnesota; Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri; Assistant Minority Leader of the House Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts; Representative Claude Parsons, of Illinois; Representative John Dempsey, of New Mexico; Representative and Mrs. Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma; Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, and others.

The committee is authorized to make a comprehensive investigation and study of the subject of statehood and report to the senate and the house of representatives not later than January 15 of next year.

It was in 1900 that the last official visit was made to Hawaii—two years after the islands were annexed to the United States.

ATLANTA THEATER NEWS

'It's All Yours' Opens At the Rialto Today

"It's All Yours" opening its Atlanta engagement at the Rialto theater today, is the latest of the Columbia specials that have brought fans the best comedy romances.

The picture is played by a cast headed by Madeline Carroll, Francis Lederer and Mischa Auer. Miss Carroll and Lederer are co-starred for the first time and make an attractive team, while Auer, reigning sensation among newcomers to comedy, has his finest role.

Mary C. McCall, who ranks tops among scenarists, wrote the script for "It's All Yours," and Elliott Nugent, a master director, wielded the microphone. Coast critics who previewed the picture declared it had the same type of appeal that made such box office successes out of "It Happened One Night," "My Man Godfrey" and "Mr. Deeds." It tells the story of a young lawyer who becomes notorious for his night life escapades and the girl, a quiet little secretary to the boy's uncle, who is given the job of reforming him, while all the time she is secretly in love with him.

'Exclusive' Tops Bill At the Paramount

A story of a newspaper war is used as the background for the new drama "Exclusive," with Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer, Charlie Ruggles and Lloyd Nolan, which opens today at the Paramount theater.

Taken from the stage hit "Roaring Girl" by John C. Moffitt, the story deals with MacMurray and Ruggles, newspapermen, who refuse an offer made to them by Nolan, owner of a corrupt paper, to work for him. Ruggles' daughter, Miss Farmer, who is also MacMurray's sweetheart, doesn't understand the principles which make it impossible for the two men to accept, and goes to work for Nolan as his star reporter.

Through a story which she uncovers, she causes one of the city's leading citizens to take his life. It then becomes the duty for her father to expose his daughter's tactics and the methods used by her employer.

The climax is reached when Nolan, trapped in his own web, attempts to rid himself of Miss Farmer because "she knows too much." It then devolves upon MacMurray and Ruggles to save the girl and at the same time to rid the city of Nolan.

Film of Folsom Riot Featured at Capitol

Reminiscent of the Thanksgiving Day prison break at Folsom prison in 1927 is the riot scene filmed for "Nancy Steele Is Missing," starring Victor McLaglen, Walter Connolly and June Lang, which opens a week's engagement at the Capitol theater Sunday.

The Folsom riot started in the mess hall, and in the film story a similar riot starts there when McLaglen, taunted as a "spy," goes over the table for the throat.

of his accuser. The outbreak, pre-conceived, is the signal for a wholesale prison break attempt. Like its real counterpart, the break fails.

Director George Marshall used 100 stunt men and 400 regular extras for the filming of the riot scene. The regular extras simply ran when the "rioting" began, but the stunt men were the players to upset tables, engage in hand-to-hand fights with guards, and generally risk their necks to put exciting action into the scene.

On the stage also starting Sunday the Capitol will offer "Show Boat Frolics," an Owen Bennett production featuring a large cast of musical comedy and vaudeville stars.

Current screen offering is "Hotel Haywire," with a large cast of comedy stars and "New Yorkers Varieties" on the stage. This program is presented through Saturday.

'Toast of New York' Comes to Fox Today

Bringing to the screen the romance upon the career of Jim Fisk, one of the most colorful and spectacular financiers and high-rollers of the period immediately following the Civil War, "The Toast of New York" opens at the Fox today for a week's engagement. The cast includes Edward Arnold, Cary Grant, Frances Farmer, Jack Oakie and a cast in a glittering panorama of American drama.

Fisk, beginning as a small-town peddler in the photoplay, becomes one of the most powerful money barons of Wall Street. Amassing a fortune from the manipulation of the stock of the Erie railroad, he lavishes a king's ransom on Josie Mansfield, an unknown beauty whom he sponsors and makes a Broadway star, only to lose her amid the wreck of his many ambitions. The picture has been produced upon an elaborate scale.

Forbidden by the courts to conduct the business of the Erie in New York, the resourceful Fisk moves the headquarters of the company to Jersey City and when it seems that Commodore Vanderbilt will gain control of the road, Fisk works the printing press overtime to issue more securities. Colorful and flamboyant, his name is repeated on the front pages of the daily newspapers and his lavish spending is the eighth wonder of the period. His end is equally as sensational as his rise.

Fresh from her laurels in "Come and Get It," in which she also played opposite Arnold, Frances Farmer has the Josie Mansfield role. Cary Grant, zooming to new honors, is cast as Jim Fisk's pal "Dandy" Body, who finally wins Josie from him. Jack Oakie, as another crony of the meteoric financier, has a side-splitting comedy role. Rare humor as well as spectacular drama pervades the action.

SUTTON REITERATES DENIAL OF 'POLITICS'

Education's Advances Lauded as Means of Reducing Accident Toll.

GRiffin, Ga., Aug. 26.—Politics has so far been kept out of the selection of Georgia highway patrol candidates, Judge Clement E. Sutton said here today, despite what he termed desperate efforts by some unnamed persons to "horn in."

Speaking before the Griffin Rotary Club, Judge Sutton, who is highway patrol legal advisor, thus reiterated his denial of political favor, charged by Representative D. K. Jones, of Elbert county, and again invited the Elbert legislator to inspect the job application files of the patrol.

Pointing to the fact Georgia "ranks next to the bottom in education, and next to the top in the number of accidents," Judge Sutton lauded educators of the state of their program and predicted that Georgia will advance from 47th to at least 25th place in education within five years.

"And when we do," he added, "accidents will decrease in Georgia, because proper education and lack of accidents go hand in hand." The highway patrol will work in close co-operation with sheriffs, he said, and will not infringe upon the duties or activities of those or other officers. They will handle no fines or bonds, he said, adding: "And if a patrolman stops you and tells you to put up a cash bond, just hall headquarters in Atlanta and report him to us. Then see how quickly he will be made to turn in his uniform."

"We must go slow," he said,

"because we know mistakes are going to be made. But give us time, deal gently with the patrolmen, and in a short time Georgia will have a real highway patrol," explained the process of elimination which brought the number down to 260, and then finally to about 100.

ROOSEVELT OKAYS ACT TO PLUG TAX; GAINS FORECAST

Treasury Experts Expect 100
Millions More in Federal Revenue.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(P)—A measure designed to correct "flaws" in federal revenue laws and thereby make it more difficult to avoid income taxes became law today when signed by President Roosevelt.

Treasury experts, who started the movement for the legislation when tax receipts this spring failed to measure up to expectations, estimated it would pour $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 into the federal coffers.

Objectives Described.
Main objectives of the new law are:

To discourage piling up of incomes in personal holding companies where they would be taxed at lower rates than those on individual incomes.

To encourage dissolution of American-owned foreign personal holding companies and tax the owners of the companies' income, regardless of whether they receive dividends.

To halt incorporation of yachts and country estates for tax avoidance purposes.

To stop incorporation of personal abilities, such as musical talent.

To provide higher rates on non-resident aliens.

To curtail "artificial" tax deductions.

Others Explained.
To eliminate the $1,000 exemption allowed all trusts and thus discourage the splitting up of income among a chain of trusts for purpose of bringing it within lower tax brackets.

Bills which the President pocket-vetted included:
A proposal that it be made a federal offense knowingly to transport and receive stolen animals in interstate commerce.

A proposal that certain derogatory words be stricken from War Department and Veterans' Administration records relating to Ernest S. Frazier, formerly of the Texas national guard.

ALL STEEL JOISTS MUST BE RENEWED

used in the construction of the roof of the entire assembly hall.

Recommendations Made.
Based upon its findings to date, your commission recommends the following:

"1. Your commission recommends that the section of roof in which the collapse occurred be rebuilt with a pitch to prevent the accumulation of water and that additional outlets be provided to accommodate the quick discharge of maximum rains. This your commission believes is essential, not because proper materials in the construction of a flat roof would not carry the load of the accumulated water from excessive rains, but because we believe it needless to subject the main roof truss to this additional load.

"Your commission can see no reason to change the type of construction previously used but does recommend that new materials be rigidly inspected and tested before using.

"2. Your commission further recommends that all steel joists used in other parts of the auditorium of the same manufacture as those used in the collapsed section of the roof be replaced with joists rigidly inspected and tested.

"3. Your commission, because of the lack of time, has been unable to investigate the other

Investigators Blame Defective Steel in Roof Collapse

Blaming defective steel for the collapse of part of the auditorium roof last Sunday, the board of inquiry is shown here handing Mayor Hartsfield a report which declares the entire auditorium roof unsafe. Joists of the type which buckled, made by the same company, are used throughout. Left to right are Mayor Hartsfield (seated), Carl F. Nonnemaker, Robert S. Fiske and Robert G. Lose, engineer members of the board of inquiry. Their investigations will continue.

structural elements of the entire building."

The report was received by Hartsfield, White, Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state WPA administrator; Colonel O. K. Yeager, WPA building operations director; R. L. McDougall, state WPA engineer, and E. S. Lewis, of the firm of Dillon & Lewis, architects who designed the remodeling plans.

Chance Element There.
"As the situation is now, the auditorium roof might stand 100 years or it might cave in during a windstorm next week," said Colonel Yeager.

Inquiry board members told the mayor that it will be possible to put in new tested steel joists alongside the present ones which would strengthen the roof to a point where it would be entirely safe. McDougall and H. A. Rawlins, WPA engineer, said there are approximately 320 steel bar joists in the entire auditorium which were manufactured by the same company that made the ones which collapsed. It is on this point that engineers believe the auditorium roof is unsafe.

The steel joists which broke without bending were of web design, made by the Riverside Steel Company, of Wheeling, W. Va., McDougall said. Lose and Fiske said the webwork in the joists evidently gave way first. They said the webbing was improperly welded and that the steel was of defective manufacture.

Bought by Treasury.
"The joists were purchased through the procurement division of the Treasury Department on low bid at a cost of about $3,000," Colonel Yeager asserted.

Both city and WPA engineers had inspected the materials to see that they came up to specifications, it was said. Hartsfield was insistent upon knowing whose responsibility it was to inspect the materials used.

"As required by rules and regulations of the Works Progress Administration, the sponsor (Atlanta), is responsible for the adequacy of the plans, designs, and specifications and for the engineering calculations in connection with the work proposed," Colonel Yeager stated.

He asserted the WPA had fulfilled all that it had agreed to do in connection with the project. Funds for this project have been entirely exhausted, Miss Shepperson said. Money to make repairs must be approved by the President in a new application.

Seeking to lay the responsibility somewhere, Hartsfield inquired, "Whose baby is this?" and Colonel Yeager answered, "Whose auditorium is it?" He said the WPA agreed only to furnish so much material and so much labor on the Atlanta project.

However, the mayor announced he will ask the city attorney to investigate the possibility of requiring the steel company which made the alleged defective joists to make good on the price paid, at least. This phase will be taken up immediately, it was said.

Elaborating on their report concerning the safety of the main auditorium roof, members of the board of inquiry said that as long as the weight of the roof depends upon joists of the type which failed, no one could be sure the heavy copper roofing would not come tumbling down under added stress or strain.

Colonel Yeager suggested the possibility of strengthening the roof with standards built up from the floor, as a cheaper means of attaining the same end by replacing the steel bar joists.

Tedious Task Involved.

Engineers pointed to the tedious work in laying new joists, which may have to be of special design, beside the present joists. Fiske said such a project would take at least 60 days after the money for purchasing the material was obtained.

He advised the mayor not to plan opening of the auditorium until Christmas. White said concerts and several conventions are already booked for the auditorium beginning late in September, but agreed the auditorium cannot be used until public confidence in it is restored.

Regarding the collapsed roof, which fell in and poured thousands of gallons of water into the auditorium proper last Sunday afternoon, Fiske, Lose and Nonnemaker recommended it be reconstructed in a pitch, not because with proper materials it would not hold up water which might accumulate on it, but because a flat roof places an unnecessary strain on the huge truss that spans the entire auditorium and to which it is attached on one side. The other side is fixed to the rear wall of the old armory building.

They explained to the mayor that the joists did not pull out from the rear armory building wall until after the joists buckled six feet from the connections.

Repair Small Item.
They asserted repairing the hole was a small item compared with the cost of strengthening the entire main auditorium roof and eliminating the possibility of it caving in as the result of other defective steel.

It was pointed out the joists that were condemned are not the same as the long truss joists which uphold the main auditorium roof. These long trusses run from side-wall to side-wall.

Fiske, Nonnemaker and Lose asserted that in a casual inspection of the main auditorium's construction work, they found it good and satisfactory.

"There are some things about the organ loft which we do not like and there are a few other places where the attachments are poorly constructed in the roof," Nonnemaker commented.

City Poorly Equipped.

Mayor Hartsfield, in directing inspection of the old armory building as to its structural safety, told the board "the city has very little money and we can not afford to make any costly renovations in this part of the building, because if we do, we will just have to shut it down and not use it."

Fire Chief O. J. Parker, Building Inspector C. J. Bowen, and City Electrician Deway L. Johnson, who three years ago condemned the armory as unsafe, are to make another inspection of it next week, White announced yesterday.

Amount of money which the city will be required to put up for repairing the hole and replacing the defective joists was not settled yesterday.

Yeager said the WPA is anxious to co-operate to "the extent of its ability" and Miss Shepperson echoed his assurance but they could not say at the moment what part of the cost the WPA will share and what part will be left to the city.

Course Predicted.
It was predicted that the city will probably pay skilled labor and possibly provide some of the materials but that the WPA will assume the largest part of the burden. It was brought out yesterday that Atlanta spent about $40,000 in renovating the auditorium and that the WPA expended some $525,000. The city figure did not include seats and stage equipment. The total amount spent thus far on the renovation program runs more than $600,000, it was reported.

Architect Lewis, Engineer McDougall and Councilman White are to confer today regarding preparation of the application for WPA aid, it was announced.

Asked if she would forgive the writer if the statements made in the letter were true, Mrs. Lucas said sharply: "I should say not; not for that sort of thing. She realized what she was doing and should be given some punishment."

Captain O'Connell expressed the opinion the letter was genuine and began a search for the woman who wrote it.

ON WASH DAY.

"I'm always impressed with my laundry equipment when I have to do curtains."

"I forget to count my blessings," sometimes," confided Ruth E., "especially on wash day when my work is more than cut in two by my washer and mangle."

"But for some reason or other, I never fail to be impressed with the wonders of my machines when I have a big batch of curtains to do. We have about a million windows—well, nearly! And you know what work it is to wash and iron curtains by hand. Now I switch them through the washer, then put them through the mangle . . . When you get on to doing curtains with the mangle, it's easy and does them beautifully. The trick in putting curtains through the mangle is not to fold them. Put them through the full width from each selvage. Then you have to watch not to pull the ends and get the curtain stretched out of shape."

"I've been getting very expert at tinting my curtains, too. I just think there's nothing nearer to curtains that get a tinting nearly every time you wash them. That way you can have them in a pale yet definite tone instead of having to get them a lot deeper than you really want them, knowing that they'll fade."

Experimenting With Tints.
"I love to experiment with tints and have had the grandest luck mixing them. Some of my curtains I have in a very sunny peach color that I got by mixing yellow and pink. And pink with a little sky blue tint added gives a lovely off-pink that's just the thing this season. Another color that's nice for curtains is chartreuse . . . you get that by adding a lot of extra yellow to the green tint or else by toning yellow with blue. Any way the fun of it is that you never get quite the same tone twice—sometimes it will run more toward yellow and sometimes more toward green. All of them are nice. Straight yellow is a good color for curtains if you want a sunny effect. In mixing tints, be careful not to mix too large a batch of tint at a time or the colors may grey up."

"You have to watch out about the cover on your mangle roller when you are ironing newly tinted curtains because of course they will color it. I usually use an old cloth on the roller that I can throw away afterwards."

"I think nixon is the best material to use because it hangs in such beautiful folds. White dress voile is nice too and so is theatrical gauze. I try to keep to fabrics that don't need starch. That's where you really get into trouble with curtains, so I steer clear of such fabrics. Then I like to paint the rods and hardware the same color as the woodwork and curtains."

FOOT ITCH AGAIN.

Trench worm, athlete's foot, foot itch, ringworm, trichophytosis, dermatomycosis, tinea, was one of the most common subjects of inquiry a few years ago. Now days go by without an inquiry about this condition. I infer that people are avoiding exposure by taking the trouble to wear slippers or other foot covering when walking about the floor of swimming pool places, gymnasiums, hotel rooms, bath establishments or when walking on the ground at beaches or wherever people go barefoot. Probably the general practice of requiring patrons of such places to step into a footbath of one or another parasitocidal or fungicidal solution has helped to reduce the prevalence of foot itch.

The condition is due to the growth of a fungus in the skin. This fungus is present in fine scales that drop off from the affected skin. The scales readily convey the fungus to the skin of the next person to tread on the spot barefoot.

The fungus may live in the lining of the shoe or in the stocking for days, weeks or months.

Whenever any treatment is applied for the relief or cure of foot itch, it is necessary to treat the linings of all shoes that have been worn since contracting the disease. If this is not done, reinfection is quite likely. Reinfection may occur when shoes are worn again after an interval of several months—say some white shoes put away at the end of a summer season and worn again the next season.

One good fungicide for the lining of shoes is plain gasoline (not fancy stuff). Pour an ounce or two in each shoe, swish it about to moisten the whole lining of the toes . . . ritually, and drain it into the next shoe, and then set the shoes in an open air place to dry.

Another good fungicide, which is also excellent for correcting foul odor when there is excessive sweating of the feet, is formaldehyde. Formaldehyde is strong stuff and will burn and irritate skin if applied undiluted. The standard Formaldehyde Solution (Liquor Formaldehydum) contains about 37 per cent of formaldehyde, is a strong germicide, disinfectant and preservative. One ounce of this standard formaldehyde solution may be diluted with from four to eight ounces of water and thus diluted it may be applied to the soles of the feet once or twice a week and allowed to dry. An ounce or two of the diluted formaldehyde solution may be poured in each shoe and swished around to moisten the insole and the lining of the toes, then drained into the next shoe. After this bath the shoes should be allowed to dry in open air at least 24 hours before they are worn again. Formaldehyde does not injure cloth, fabric, leather or color. It has a characteristic odor which disappears with drying.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Psoriasis.

Please give some suggestions for persistent psoriasis. I have had it for about 15 years and sometimes it seems almost cleared up, but always comes back. (T. S. B.)

Answer:—Best suggestions I can offer are (1) Sunbaths; (2) Large daily intake of vitamin D; (3) Diet to include plenty of fruits, nuts and fresh vegetables, milk and all kinds of cheese; (4) In certain cases where metabolism is slow, medication with ductless gland hormones supervised by the physician; (5) Light X-ray treatments by skilled radiologist.

Line Water.

Is lime water helpful for the preservation of the teeth? If so, how is it taken? My hair is slowly receding and my teeth cause me considerable trouble. (H. D. D.)

Answer:—More lime in a quart of milk or an ordinary helping of cheese or a plate of beans or a generous dish of cole slaw than there is in a quart of lime water. Food lime (calcium) more likely to be assimilated than the lime in lime water. Adequate calcium assimilation essential for good teeth. Adequate daily intake of vitamin D essential for calcium utilization. Aside from supplementing vitamin-poor diet with a vitamin D concentrate, you can generate some vitamin D of your own by exposing naked body to direct sunlight daily.

It is smart. That dare-devil spirit tempts others, and the great mocker, for that is the Bible's description of strong drink, the great mocker gets in his deadly stroke, driving his fangs deep into the will-power of young and old alike.

Evangeline Babb has written something about this business of intoxicating liquor that I wish to pass on, and please keep in mind the fact that intoxicating liquors are not always called whisky. Says Miss Booth:

"Intoxicating drink has drained more blood, hung more crepe, sold more homes, plunged more people into bankruptcy, armed more villains, slain more children, snapped more wedding rings, defiled more innocence, blinded more eyes, twisted more limbs, debauched more reason, wrecked more manhood, dishonored more womanhood, broken more hearts, blasted more lives, driven more to suicide, and dug more graves, than any other poisoned scourge that ever swept its death-dealing waves against the world."

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Wednesday—At last the sun shines again. I have become interested in archery in the past few weeks and spent some time yesterday afternoon and a little while this morning trying to learn the rudiments of what seems to me a far more complicated skill than I had supposed. The number of things to be remembered leave me constantly wondering about which particular thing I forgot, for there is an explanation for every one of your mistakes, according to the book at last.

I have much more respect for the Indians than I ever had before. Some day, perhaps, all these things will become automatic in much the way that driving a car becomes automatic when you have done it over long period.

The people who once occupied this fair country of ours obtained much of their food, as well as fighting their wars, with bows and arrows. They shot them from every position, from running horses at moving objects—and yet we pride ourselves on the things we can do. We have no greater physical skill today. We simply have learned to use different tools, some of which are more complicated and perhaps more dangerous in their mechanism.

I have been having an amusing experience. Letters have come to me from Wisconsin, New Jersey and Illinois, telling me how very sorry the writers were to have missed my call. Apparently I went to some restaurant or tea room, in which they also exhibited antiques. The proprietors being away, I left a little note explaining that I had come and was sorry to miss them, either written on a slate or register I suppose.

Someone must have decided that it would be amusing to impersonate me and, as in the past, people from a number of places have told me they were constantly taken for me on trains or in hotels. I suppose it is not such a difficult thing to carry through a joke of this kind.

The only disappointment comes when I am forced to write that I have not been in any of these places this summer. My only trip far afield was to Indianapolis. Otherwise a day's motor drive would cover the furthest point to which I have journeyed.

A little item in the paper this morning told of a Rochester (N. Y.) public library where they have hit on a most entertaining way of stimulating the interest of children in reading. They have built a model Dutch well-house and named it, "The Wishing Well." A child can pull a rope and find a question on any subject in which it is interested. Attached to the question will be the list of books which will give the desired information.

I congratulate the person who thought of this idea, for the fun of pulling a rope will provide many youngsters with new interests. I have often wondered why children's libraries did not give "Jack Horner" parties every now and then, or treasure hunts. Either one could be worked out so as to stimulate the reading interest of the children in the community.

Your Figure, Madam

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

FORMULA FOR YOUTH INCLUDES PLAY FOR EXERCISE.

How to look 18 at 27—wouldn't you like to know? I thought so when I asked Wini Shaw, point-blank, how she manages it.

This newcomer to the films, it seems to me, is well qualified to answer such a question. Miss Shaw has upset all the traditions surrounding breaking into the movies. She began her screen career after she had been married for several years and was the mother of three fine children. She looks 18 in broad daylight without the assistance of makeup, and she has the figure of a debutante.

In answer to that question, she didn't say "exercise," right away. She began by saying, "I think happiness is the most important factor in a woman's looks. If a woman can get happiness out of whatever she is doing, she can't help looking and feeling young. Happiness seems to go with youth."

Play keeps you in perfect form.

As for exercise, that is something this beautiful actress takes pretty much for granted. She would rather play outdoors than eat, preferring tennis, swimming, horseback riding, and ice skating. She has been doing all of them since she was a child, a taste in recreation that helps to account for her perfect measurements: Height, five feet six and one-half inches; weight, 120 pounds; bust, 34 1-2 inches; hips, 35 inches; waist, 25 inches.

A Wini Shaw tip worth noting is to keep moving. This young actress is too impatient and has too much energy to wait for elevators. She rings once, and if the elevator doesn't come right away, she walks up. She even walks while riding the escalators. It may be lost motion, but it is not wasted exercise.

Miss Shaw has a firm belief in good old-fashioned soap and water as a beauty treatment. She likes a flesh brush and rough towel and has a Spartan appreciation of cold showers. These circulation rousers, along with a penchant for plenty of sleep, help to explain the fact that she has no wrinkles. Not even a tiny one.

A woman's best friend, in Wini Shaw's opinion, is a full-length mirror. Study yourself from head to toe and from all angles to check posture and figure faults.

And there, without any frills or mystery, you have the program of a woman who keeps her teen age freshness in spite of hard work (which they tell me acting is) and in spite of having three children.

Beauty, According To You

(Posed by Claudette Colbert)

Take a Rich, Bubbly, Exhilarating Bath, Fragrant and Really Relaxing.

By LILLIAN MAE.

It's grand at any time, but especially so after a fatiguing day, before a gay engagement, or as a restful tonic before retiring.

This bath cologne is something new—at least it is to me. It is said to contain the same beneficial elements as mineral crystals, and is much easier to use.

All you have to do is to sprinkle from the shaker-top of the pretty four-sided bottle about a table-spoonful of the cologne directly under the spout in your tub, then open both hot and cold faucets to full force. The force of the water creates a deep, rich, fairy-like blanket of fragrant bubbles over the surface of the tub.

Your next step is to climb in and really relax, while the soft bubbles caress your tired body. You'll undoubtedly linger longer than usual in your bath, but how refreshed you will feel when you emerge! The bubbles do not contain soap, so after you have enjoyed them for a while, you'll need to apply soap before your cleansing is complete.

This cologne may be obtained in two fragrances—one a light, woody pine fragrance with the exhilarating coolness of the forests, and the other, merely called eau de cologne, as fragrant as a spring song, and as bracing as a mountain breeze.

If you occasionally go on a light "luxury spree" for things that really make everyday life more exciting and delightful, you'll want a bottle of this bath cologne.

Phone me at my office in The Constitution building if you wish to know the name of the article mentioned and the stores at which it may be purchased.

Mimi O'Beime's Recent Trip Reads Like Interesting Story Book

By Sally Forth.

LUNCHEON at the American embassy in Yokohama, visiting night clubs in Shanghai and going swimming in Hong Kong are just a few of the incidents highlighting the recent visit to the Orient enjoyed by Mimi O'Beime. Mimi sailed last May for Manila to visit Lieutenant W. E. Bare and Mrs. Bare and en route she had a perfect whirl of good times at the various ports of call in the far east.

She sailed on the President Hoover from San Francisco for the 20-day trip to the Philippine Islands, but in those 20 days the lovely Atlanta belle had a round of good times which read like a story book. As she expresses it, she feels like an "overexposed camera film" she has taken in so much.

On the boat going over, among the passengers was Crisco Cruz, known as the "Paul Whiteman of Manila," who was on his way to his native land after visiting America to learn the rhythm of "swing time" music.

At the Hawaii port of call, Mimi says the passengers glimpsed Arline Judge and June Lang, of the movies, basking in the sunshine on Waikiki Beach in characteristic bathing beauty style.

Another passenger on the boat was a charming girl named Freddie Billard, of Washington, D. C., who was en route to Yokohama to become the bride of A. B. Lamm, commercial attaché of the American embassy in Tokyo. The official met his fiancée at the boat and with Mimi and other congenial travelers, they were whisked away in the official car up to Tokyo, where they had luncheon at the American embassy.

From the Japanese capital, Mimi and her traveling companions boarded a train for a cross-country trip to Kyoto and Kobe. From the latter place they again boarded the President Hoover for Shanghai. In the Chinese city, which is noted for its gayety, the party attended many of the famous night clubs, which of course, were at their height of popularity in June, before the present war clouds gathered. Among those who entertained Mimi was Joe Johnson, representative of the National City Bank of New York in Shanghai. His brother, Tom Johnson, married Sarah Hewlett last month, the event being one of the social events on the Atlanta calendar of weddings this year.

The next stop was in Hong Kong, where Mimi says one of the most thrilling times she had was going swimming in Repulse bay, under a full oriental moon and dancing later at the beautiful Lido Club.

"At long last" Mimi arrived at Manila, where the following month was spent at Fort Santiago, where her hosts reside. Mrs. Bare is the former Bessie Baxter, of Atlanta, and her marriage to the young West Point graduate was an event of two years ago.

The schedule of good times at the army post depended largely on the weather, for the rainy season was on. Nevertheless, a series of parties honored the Atlanta visitor. Many side trips were made to interesting points on the island, among them being one to the famous "Bat Caves," and to Lake Paal. Mimi says the Army and Navy Club in Manila is unusually beautiful and was the scene of many gay parties.

One of the gayest weeks spent there was known as "Des Pineda Week," rather a hall and farewell occasion, as an army transport bringing new army families to the fort had put into port and was weighing anchor to take other army families back to the United States.

On her way home Mimi stopped again in Japan, and she reports that one of the most exciting events of her stay was being on the scene during a demonstration air raid. She says that it was held as a method of teaching people to protect themselves in case of war—a measure which has been used to great advantage. Mimi says the streets were roped off and there was so much excitement that the party arrived at the boat one minute before the gangplank was raised. Stopping at Yokohama, Mimi saw the famous Big Buddha, where scores of Japanese soldiers were worshipping. In Hawaii she saw the native girls dancing the hula-hula, which was the last glimpse she had of mid-Pacific before the boat headed for American shores. She landed at San Francisco and visited British Columbia, Lake Louise, Banff, then down to Chicago before making the last lap of her wonderful trip to Atlanta.

TOM WEST'S barbecue Wednesday evening for Nell Hunnicutt, bride-elect, Elizabeth Everett, visitor, and Clara Neuhoff, who is soon to move to Roanoke, Va., ended up quite gayly at Peachtree Gardens when the hundred members of the party who were attending the Club Quadrille started to do the Big Apple. Ruth Woltz, charming North Carolina visitor of Mrs. Holcombe Green called the figures and it was not long before the whole dance had joined in.

Miss Ruth Cox Becomes Bride Of John Edward Lantz Jr.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN EDWARD LANTZ JR.

Miss Ruth Cox became the bride of John Edward Lantz Jr., of Kokomo, Ind., at a ceremony taking place at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Glenn Memorial church. Dr. R. C. Rhodes, assisted by the Rev. Nathaniel G. Long, church pastor, officiated in the presence of fashionable gathering of friends and relatives.

The bride chose the 34th wedding anniversary date of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Harvey W. Cox, upon which to plight her troth. Dr. Malcolm Dewey presented a musical program preceding the ceremony and Ray Nixon sang. The altar was banked with palms and cathedral candelabra held lighted tapers and smaller candelabra were similarly illuminated. Centering the greenery was a bouquet of white gladioli and entwining the chancel rail were sprays of asparagus fern.

Ushers and groomsmen were Albert and Warren Cox, brothers of the bride; James C. Howard, Ott Alston, Sterling Brinkley, William F. Quillian Jr., of Nashville, Tenn., and Russell Bales, of Gilbert, Ariz.

The attendants were Misses Marguerite Rhodes, the maid of honor; Miss Lucille Taylor, Miss Frances Eleazer, Mrs. Warren Cox and Mrs. Russell Bales, of Gilbert, Ariz. They were gowned in taffeta dresses made along princess lines and featuring short puffed sleeves. The V-shaped necklines were edged with a tiny stand-up collar of white lace, and the full skirts extended to form trains.

Miss Rhodes' gown was pink, with a coronet of pink flowers in her hair. Miss Eleazer and Mrs. Bales wore aquamarine, and their coronets were of white flowers. They carried arm bouquets of Tailsman roses. Miss Taylor and Mrs. Cox wore gold taffeta, with coronets of white flowers, and carried bouquets of yellow-throated gladioli.

Boone Bowen, the ring-bearer, wore a white suit and carried the ring in the heart of a white dahlia. The bride descended the aisle with her father, Dr. Harvey W. Cox, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the chancel by the groom and his best man, Gilbert Rainge, of New Salisbury, Ind.

The lovely bride was gowned in white satin, and the long sleeves were full at the shoulders. Slight shirring was introduced at the shoulders and the long train was built into the skirt. The belt was of crushed satin in the back and corded in the front, with a pearl clasp matching two pearl clips at the V-neckline.

The tulle veil extended from a cap caught to the bride's hair with orange blossoms worn by Mrs. R. C. Rhodes at her wedding, and the becoming face veil was waist-length. The bride carried a lace handkerchief given by Mrs. J. Sam Guy and an arm bouquet of white roses showered with valley lilies.

Mrs. Harvey W. Cox, mother of the bride, wore blue lace and her corsage was of Tailsman roses. Mrs. John Lantz, of Kokomo, Ind., mother of the groom, wore blue sheer and a corsage of Tailsman roses.

TEACH YOURSELF TO TAP DANCE AND SEE HOW POPULAR YOU'LL BE

Yes, tap dancing will help you blossom like the rose. Did you know that Eleanor Powell took up dancing because she was shy? All you need—to do the clever tap routines that make you a hit at parties—is practice space in your living room and simple instructions and diagrams.

The trickiest tap routines are based on just six tap sounds that you can easily learn. Look at the girl doing the Back Tap. To make this tap sound, stand on left foot and hold right foot forward. Bend right knee, bring right foot back, striking floor sharply with ball of foot, as diagramed at bottom of sketch.

When you've learned the basic sounds it's fun to put them to music, to accent gay rhythms with the lively Hop Tap and Jump Tap sketched.

For both those taps you use only the ball of the foot. To Hop Tap you hop on one foot, to Jump Tap you spring from one foot to the other.

With our 40-page booklet, "Tap Dancing and New Variations in Social Dances," you quickly learn the basic taps, how to do a waltz clog, a buck routine; you get ideas for dances of your own. Also, new variations in tango, waltz, rumba, fox-trot to give zip and ease to your social dancing. A thorough home course!

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Tap Dancing and New Variations in Social Dances," to Home Institute, The Atlanta Constitution. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

ADVENTURE IN LOVE

By KATHRN BEEMIS WILSON

INSTALLMENT XXVI

Whether her mood was either, she did not pause to analyze. She only knew that she was a little excited, in danger of becoming hysterical, moved. Now, after long months, she was running back to everything from which she had run in a burst of restlessness and apprehension. This might be a stimulating vacation or a cruelly unbearable one. She almost wished she hadn't come. Then she thought of Tom and knew that she must go through with it.

Millie, with Virginia Dewey, Joe Ramble, and Gordon Peel rushed forward as Velma followed a red-cup up the station ramp. The girls burst into high-pitched welcome and hasty kisses. Joe and Gordon got in kisses of their own account. Flanders Smith suddenly stepped out of the crowd and cordially shook her hand.

For a brief instant, Velma was slightly bewildered. Then a surge of the old light-heartedness went through her. Why, everything was all right. It was all a sort of game. These people, who had once allowed her to go her own way without protest, were taking her up again. Was it out of curiosity?

She laughed with these girls in their bewitchingly lovely fur evening wraps, their escorts in evening clothes, as they strolled through the station and outside into a fast fall of snow. The chauffeur's liveries were instantly flecked with tiny sparkling flakes of white when he got out to open the limousine's doors. Under the brilliant lights, the city had taken on a fairylike unreality.

Velma was suddenly enchanted. She would enjoy the present, forget Carryville and every one in it. She would be gay! But she found that this was not too easily accomplished, for in the next instant all the old painful memory returned. The proximity to Virginia Dewey brought back the loss of her dear father, the vanishing of her fortune through the maneuvering of Merry Dewey. A lump rose in her throat.

The embarrassment of Flanders fascinated her. He desperately desired to intimate to Velma that her presence still stirred him, but he dared not cease his attentions to the watchful Virginia.

"His fool antics don't impress me, if he only realized it," sighed Velma, to herself.

The chauffeur drove them swiftly through downtown Chicago. The big car swirled and skidded around icy, traffic-congested corners to the accompaniment of incessant chatter inside and roar of the city outside. Velma was again in the midst of commotion, speed, high flippancy.

She smiled a great deal. Not with these old friends, as they thought, but at them. Everything they did and said was so transparent to her now. She was seeing them for the first time as might a stranger.

Not that the Carryville social set was vastly dissimilar, because they were imitators of smart crowds whenever they could be. Dear old Carryville! Tom? She wondered suddenly in the midst of this whirling through space what Tom was doing. She had left strict orders with Mae Forland that no one was to know where she had gone. Mae had faithfully promised to keep her secret.

Millie suggested, "Let's take Velma home for cocktails—give her a chance to dress—then go to the Club Bertrand for dinner." "The Club Bertrand? Is that still in existence?" asked Velma, thinking of the many brilliant parties she had given and attended in that ultra-smart club.

"Why, you darling!" gushed Millie, tossing her bare brown head. "Of course it's still here! You've been away only a few months!" "That's all," returned Velma, "but it seems—like years."

Flanders put in, "It sounds complimentary. Could it be she's missed us?"

Virginia Dewey laughed too sharply, elevated a thinly plucked eyebrow. "Nothing personal in that remark, I trust," she said, and her companions chuckled in unison.

Velma's cheeks burned. She was relieved when the car drew up before the Roberts' big town house on the Gold Coast.

A maid showed her to her suite while the others sauntered into the music room looking for cocktails and radio music.

Millie soon joined Velma upstairs. Her vivacious, darkly pretty face seemed to fill the orchid and gold room with a sudden glow. Her long black satin gown tightly fitted her small figure, the dozens of tiny cut steel buttons decorating the long sleeves and backless blouse, vying with her sparkling blue eyes. Her brown hair was fashioned into intricate waves and curls, which must have taken her maid hours to arrange.

"What are you wearing, darling?" she asked flashing Velma an affectionate glance.

Velma mumbled from beneath the wine-colored suit skirt she was slipping off over her head. "Oh, nothing much. I've a cocoa brown crepe trimmed with shirred pink chiffon—would that do?"

Millie's personal maid, Donna, held up the exquisite imported dinner gown she had just taken from Velma's bag.

"How perfectly stunning!" exclaimed the surprised Millie.

Mae Forland had insisted that Velma bring this gown with her "to advertise the Forland shop, my dear." As if the Forland shop would ever attract Chicago clientele! Velma knew it was Mae's clever way of getting her to accept the gown at a ridiculously low price. But she was no end grateful. She hated returning to Chicago with the same wardrobe all her old friends had seen.

So if Millie had thought to waste any particular sympathy on Velma for having a sleazy assortment of clothes, she was to be disappointed; the dresses Velma had brought with her were quite as advanced in mod as any to be found in exclusive Chicago shops. She would of course be obliged to wear all her things repeatedly if she remained too long as Millie's guest. But for two weeks, she was amply supplied, could make quite a respectable appearance, she felt.

It was like being a Cinderella, who must disappear on the stroke of midnight—in her case, on the stroke of two weeks. Only 14 days in which to forget

Tom! Days, hours, minutes when she must be hectically busy or else on some uncontrollable impulse, call Tom up and ruin his whole life. Two weeks—which mustn't drag. She wouldn't allow them to drag. She would fill them with wild frothy nonsense. She could find it in Millie's crowd, her own old crowd, without effort. Tonight, at the Club Bertrand, she would be her old giddy self.

She little knew, however, how crushingly defeated this stout resolution was bound to be.

The Club Bertrand, with its mirrors in gold, azure, silvery reflecting rose-tinted lights, its every detail perfection, nearly overwhelmed Velma, who had not remembered it as so breath-takingly beautiful. Its colorful murals, painted by famous artists, the stunning blue leather chairs, the blue and silver glass tables, were all made for the most fastidious taste. The glamor of these appointments were, she knew, augmented by the art of a master cuisinier, known on both sides of the Atlantic—and no doubt in heaven, had decided many a connoisseur of delicate viands.

After all, it was a grand treat to be here once again. It had been so long since she'd had this kind of treat. It was enticing to be served such delicious dishes by a solicitous waiter. It was nice to dine amidst the subdued glitter and elegance of the club, although somewhat disconcerting with Flanders' dark eyes covertly watching her from across the table set for 12.

He leaned toward her suddenly and asked, "Liking this party? Do they have clubs like this in Carryville?"

Virginia Dewey, beside him, poised an ear. Her small blue eyes set in her angular, muddily-complexioned face expressed secret fear of Flanders' old sweetheart.

Velma, heartily wishing that Virginia would win and keep Flanders, put all the indifference she could muster into her reply. "They have night clubs in Carryville, of course. It's not a half bad town. I like it."

Gordon Peel on her left, said earnestly, "I wondered why you didn't strike out in business here, Velma. We all would have been glad to help."

She frowned slightly and buttered a piece of roll. It was not too easy to forget how they had seemed to desert her at a time when she most needed friends. It was so convenient not to make nice sounding statements wholly unrelated to truth.

"I—I had no idea you all loved me that much," she returned, frankly impatient.

A waiter came between them, poured champagne into Gordon's empty glass.

Why must she think of Tom now?

From across the low bowl of crimson roses centering the table, peered Joe Ramble's absurdly smirking countenance. He weaved to his feet, champagne glass precariously in hand. His thick tongue got out, "A toast! A toast—to Velma Our—sweetheart!"

Velma smiled up at the blond, handsome six feet of him, as her friends, eagerly agreeing with this tribute, raised their glasses.

UNCLE RAY'S Corner

ADVENTURES OF A MISSIONARY.

V—Help at Last.

After losing sight of the second ship, Henry had a feeling of great sadness in his heart. Would he always have to live on that island, without a single human being to keep him company?

Day after day, he went about his work, gathering firewood, and things to eat, but always there was the dread that he would not be saved.

and started to run toward the visitors. "Stop!" yelled the chief. "If you do not stop, I will throw this hatchet at you! Henry is dead. You are his spirit!"

The missionary asked the chief to come and touch him, and find out that he was flesh and blood, not a ghost, but the chief was afraid to do so. He said that if Henry was a real man, he must pick up a stone and throw it at a tree. Then the chief told him he could come close.

The five persons with the chief were his wives. They had been out on a long fishing trip, and had sailed to the island to obtain shelter for the night.

That evening was a happy one for all. A meal was prepared for the missionaries. The Maori had brought along, and Henry had his first taste of sweet potatoes in more than five months.

The next morning the chief made ready for the return to New Zealand. He expected the white man to go alone, but a strange thing had happened. Henry had come to be in great fear of a small boat.

"No," he said, "your boat is well loaded now. But will you please go to the white people at Kororalki, and tell them to send a vessel for me?"

The chief promised, and 10 days later a schooner reached the island. Henry was taken aboard, and returned safely to New Zealand. At the pier, a crowd of people came to meet him. They broke into cheers as he landed.

SEVEN MONTHS' PAY VOTED FOR SCHOOLS BY GEORGIA BOARD

Two Million Book Purchase Is Completed; Rivers Points to Saving.

The State Board of Education announced yesterday Georgia's school teachers would be paid in full for the seven-month program covering all schools in the state. Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of education, made the announcement shortly after the board completed its purchase of more than $2,000,000 of textbooks to be distributed in all grades.

Latitude Allowed.
The board, to meet the range in Georgia's climatic conditions, authorized payment of the salaries at any time between September and April—an eight-month period.

Under this plan, Dr. Collins said, the schools may start in September and close in March, or start in October and close in April.

Governor Rivers, board chairman, said that the state saved approximately $1,000,000 in the purchase of the $2,000,000 in textbooks.

Part of the saving, he said, was due to purchase of second-hand books from last year's students, while the remainder was "due to the latitude given the board in bargaining with publishers for prices."

Under the seven-month program, the state will contribute minimum salaries for teachers in grammar and high schools throughout the state. The number of teachers allotted each county depends, Rivers explained, on the population density of the county and the average daily attendance at schools.

Plan More Allotments.
Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent, said the board was studying feasibility of increasing teacher allotments to some of the smaller counties which drew fewer teachers than the number to which they were accustomed.

The board also faced determination of the specific months during which the state-aid would be given.

Rivers estimated the state-aid fund of every county would be approximately twice the amount of last year, with the "equalization fund" derived from the gasoline tax allocation continuing at approximately the same rate as last year for each school system.

Peachtree-Collier Traffic Light Urged

Hundreds of citizens in the vicinity of Peachtree and Collier roads yesterday were planning circulation of a petition requesting Fulton county commissioners to install a traffic signal light at that intersection—the scene of numerous serious auto accidents.

"A pedestrian who crosses Peachtree road at Collier in the morning or late afternoon simply takes his life in his own hands and we must have some protection," one man said. "And during those periods of the day," he added, "a motorist driving out from town finds it near impossible to turn into Collier road. The same applies to those who seek to enter Collier from Peachtree."

RATE BODY FIGHTS MOTOR LINE PLAN

Conference Files Briefs Opposing Proposal of Seaboard Railway.

Opposing proposals of the Seaboard Air Line Railway to inaugurate motor truck service over eight routes in North and South Carolina and Virginia, the Southern Motor Carriers' Rate Conference, of Atlanta, directed briefs yesterday in Washington to the Interstate Commerce Commission. The conference contended in its brief that hearings held last June on the proposals were "illegal," and that commission approval of the Seaboard's applications would be the "first step towards the return of monopoly" of the transportation system in the southeast.

Hearings last June were termed "illegal" on the grounds that joint boards to which the cases were referred were confined to members from states in which each proposed operation, considered separately, would be situated.

Seaboard contended in its brief that its undertaking was not intended to establish highway transportation independent of its rail service or to invade territory not already served by it.

The railway company also declared that no Interstate Commerce Commission certificate is required for any of the proposed routes except two.

Emory Graduates Back From Reich Tell Experiences

Signs that Germany is preparing for war were evident to two Atlanta boys who have just returned from a nine months' visit there.

Fred Potter, of 301 Tenth street, N. E., and Henry King Stanford, 740 Penn. avenue, N. E., Emory graduates who have been studying at Heidelberg on scholarships awarded them while they were at school, found that Germany is on a ration basis, and expressed belief that this was for future emergency rather than for present economic relief.

The students described the system of military highways as wide one-way thoroughfares with 15-foot grass plots in the center dividing the traffic lanes. Riding on one of the highways on bicycles the boys were halted by police and fined one mark (27 cents apiece). They were forced to make their way through a forest to find a smaller road on which to ride.

Both are students of Professor C. F. Hamft at Emory. The boys had little difficulty with the German. Stanford plans to teach French and German this fall at Emory Junior College in Valdosta. Potter will do graduate work and teach German at Tulane University.
